Czech Nazis Expected to Try in June to Join Germany

Berlin Spokesmen Predict Henlein Will Demand Plebiscite.

Sudetens Admit Union Their Aim

Offering of Terms to Benes Called Gesture to Keep Peace.

Berlin, April 26 (AP).—Nazi spokesmen in Berlin predicted today that Konrad Henlein would demand early in June that Sudeten Germans be permitted to vote on whether they desire to remain a part of Czechoslovakia or be joined to greater Germany.

Communal elections will begin in Praha (Prague) May 22 and will be held in the rest of the country between May 29 and June 6.

A high Nazi source said Henlein was restrained only by Reichsfuehrer Hitler from proclaiming last Sunday in his Carlsbad speech that his movement places itself under Hitler's leadership.

Such action would have been embarrassing in that acceptance of leadership by Hitler would have meant interference of the Reich with the affairs of another nation.

Henlein, therefore, had to content himself with sending a message of greeting to Hitler and refraining from sending one to President Benes.

That the real wish of the Sudeten Nazis is anschluss (union) with Germany was privately admitted by many delegates at the Carlsbad convention.

"In trying to come to an understanding with the Czech authorities," one top leader said, "we are choosing the lesser of two evils.

"Anschluss with Germany is our dearest wish. We know, however, that that might mean war . . . We are ready to sacrifice our dearest wishes to world peace. Our sacrifice, however, demands similar sacrifice by Czechs. Henlein has offered the hand of reconciliation three times. It never was clasped."

Roosevelt Orders Envoy to Survey Nazi Youth Camps

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday that Ambassador Hugh Wilson in Berlin is studying, at his request, the German government's outdoor camps for girls and boys.

The President said at his press conference he told Wilson he was very much interested in the camps, about which he knew very little except for the fact that the boys and girls seemed to be improving very much physically.

Ambassador Wilson's study concerns the Hitler youth movement, embracing over 7,000,000 German boys and girls. They are under the leadership of 30-year-old Baldur von Schirach, whose mother was an American of Baltimore, Md., and who says one of her ancestors signed the Declaration of Independence.

These American Girls—They Do Get Around

It certainly looks as if American girls are getting their share of Europe's royalty. First it was Nancy Langhorne who became Lady Astor and a member of Britain's Parliament. Then Mrs. Simpson, a Marylander, won the Duke of Windsor and became a Duchess. Now the daughter of a Virginian marries King Zog of Albania. Mexico Dispute Seen in Jailing Of U.S. Citizen

State, Federal Government Clash Seen as U. S. Tries to Free Texan.

Imprisonment of an American citizen on a murder charge made by a former convict in Mexico has resulted in conflicting reports from the Mexican government and the State of Chihuahua, apparently indicating a possible clash in federal and state authority.

The American, William N. Fink, 59, a resident of El Paso, Tex., and for 30 years a mining engineer in northern Mexico, is free on bail of 8,000 pesos (about $2,000) pending a hearing tomorrow. He is charged in connection with the assassination by bomb of Mayor Jose Borunda E. of Juarez, Mexico, April 1.

The arrest of Fink resulted from a statement made by Efren Escobar, 34-year-old political worker in Juarez, who has served prison terms in Mexico and in this country for forgery and other charges, and has been deported three times. He has admitted mailing the fatal bomb, but accused Fink of paying him for it.

The confessed bomber also accused another employe of the mining company with which Fink is associated, but the second employe, M. C. Little, later was released. The judge who heard the case against Escobar resigned immediately after returning an indictment.

Fink, meanwhile, lay in a Mexican penitentiary for about two weeks

2 D. C. Men, Circus Tax Lawyer Guilty

Two Washington men, Charles D. M. Greer and Nathaniel F. Rabner, both former Internal Revenue agents, and John M. Kelley, former general counsel of Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus, were found guilty in Federal Court in New York yesterday on two of four counts in connection with an alleged $3,359,016 income tax fraud.

The three were found guilty, after the jury deliberated 11 hours, of aiding and counseling the preparation and filing of false income tax returns by the circus. The huge fraud charged by the Government was based on returns on circus income for 1918-1932, inclusive.

An attorney for Kelley said the convictions would be appealed.

Second Doctor Quits as House Airs GHA Row

Hulburt Resigns; Resolution Asks U.S. to Recover $40,000 Invested.

Less than a week after announcement of the resignation of its medical director, another physician on the staff of Group Health Association yesterday notified W. C. Kirkpatrick, president, he is quitting to re-enter private practice.

While Kirkpatrick was reading Dr. R. Stephen Hulburt's letter of resignation, Representative Paul A. Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, was excoriating G. H. A. and introducing two disciplinary resolutions in the House.

One asks Congress to direct Attorney General Homer S. Cummings to take legal action to recover $40,000 the Home Owners Loan Corporation granted to get the Federal workers' health clinic started.

The other charges G. H. A. "insists upon a program that has been declared to be unsound, illegal, unethical and dangerous" and calls for Speaker Bankhead to appoint a committee of seven Representatives to conduct a thorough inquiry.

"In the interest of the public, this investigation by Congress cannot be postponed," said Shafer, spearhead of the Capitol Hill forces opposed to the group clinic, which has more than 2,500 Federal employes on its service rolls.

Dr. Hulburt said the present controversy was not responsible for his decision to leave the association's medical staff. He is a graduate of Georgetown University Medical School, class of 1931, and lives at 3000 Dent place northwest.

"After having engaged in private practice for several years, I

'Lost Army' Hits Franco From Peaks

Division, Thought Trapped, Strikes Suddenly Out of Pyrenees.

Insurgents Are Diverted From Their Attack on Two Key Bases.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, April 26.—A loyalist "lost division," previously supposed wiped out in an enemy trap, swept out of the Pyrenees today in a surprise attack on the rear of an insurgent army driving eastward along the Franco-Spanish border.

The "guerrilla" attack by the reorganized loyalist Forty-third Division was so swift and furious, reports indicated, that Gen. Emilio Solchaga's Navarrese insurgents failed to beat it off, although the loyalists were outnumbered five to one. The loyalists withdrew after furious fighting in which hundreds were reported killed.

Franco Sends Planes.

The insurgents' frontier spearhead was aimed at the loyalist border bases of Seo de Urgel and Puigcerda, just below the tiny Republic of Andorra.

An appeal to Gen. Franco brought a fleet of bombing and fighting planes northward to hunt out the loyalists in the Pineta Valley. At the same time a reserve column was moved into the sector to wipe out the "lost division" or drive it across the border into France.

[Insurgent bombing and combat planes were ordered massed at new bases on the Spanish east coast to blast holes for land forces north of Valencia the Associated Press reported.

[Gen. Franco ordered the warplanes concentrated at his Mallorca Island base to support Gen. Miguel Aranda's army.

Insurgents Threaten Madrid.

[The Mallorcan air squadrons under nominal command of Gen. Franco's air ace brother, Maj. Ramon Franco, have hitherto operated mainly with Admiral Juan Cervera's blockading fleet off the Mediterranean coast. Henceforth they will use Vinaroz, seaport just south of the Ebro River mouth, as a secondary sea base, and Balderrobbes, 30 miles to the northwest, as a land base.—Editor's note.]

In the south, three insurgent columns drove deep into loyalist territery between Teruel and the Mediterranean East Coast, over roads strewn with loyalist dead, to threaten Madrid with loss of the metropolis' food and munitions lifeline.

Government lines in the salient southeast of Montablan were reported to have given way at three points, threatening 15,000 government troops with encirclement and opening the

Torch March Set for Eve of City's Voting

Federal Union Leader Vows Ballot Won't Affect Clerks.

A torchlight parade, with representatives of every District civic group and many other organizations in line, will spur Washingtonians to the polls for their first balloting in a general election in more than half a century, the Junior Board of Commerce announced yesterday.

As plans for the parade were pushed, Arthur Bernstein, representing the District Organizing Committee of the United Federal Workers of America, assured Government employes, in a radio broadcast, that participation in the plebiscite in no way would affect their civil service standing.

Lashing government without representation, Bernstein attacked slum and health conditions in the District and said that many evils could be eradicated if District residents had the right to pick officials "responsible to them."

Health System Scored.

"Our public health system in the Capital of the United States is suffering from a generation of neglect, 20 years behind the times in method, personnel and equipment," he said.

Bernstein scored also taxes "based on inability to pay," "inadequate housing" and sanitary regulations.

The Southeast Business Men's Association issued a plea to its members to vote for District suffrage Saturday. The appeal was in the form of a postcard sent to each member of the business group.

Meanwhile 2,800 members of the Federation of Business Men's Associations yesterday pledged themselves to muster "the greatest possible vote" in Saturday's referendum.

"Our members are in this fight to the hilt," said Theodore S. Grape, president of the federation.

Parade Friday Night.

All 450 members of the Board of Commerce will form a nucleus for the torch parade, which will take place Friday night.

Details of the line of march have not been completed, but director of the parade will be Bradford Ross, son of Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint and former Governor of Wyoming.

The procession will wind through the downtown shopping district after dusk. Three or four bands, at least, will furnish music for the marchers, Ross said.

End of the parade, in which it is hoped thousands of citizens will march, will be at the park in front

Collegians Burn Hitler Book, but Effigy Escapes

Williamstown, Mass., April 26 (AP). A copy of Adolf Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf," was burned on the Williams College campus tonight and an effigy of the German dictator was stolen before it could be burned as 500 undergraduates battled in Berkshire Quadrangle.

Fists and ancient eggs mingled freely and many shirts were torn in the fracas.

H. V. E. Mitchell, 3d, of West Pittston, Pa., dressed as a preacher, was doused with buckets of water when he touched flames to "Mein Kampf." Then, as the effigy was dragged toward a bonfire amid shouts of "Down with Hitler," a group of students seized it and fled.

Pity the Poor Stork! He's Late With a Baby Hippo for the Zoo

By Gerald G. Gross

"Either the stork has taken a wide detour or he's broken down from the burden," Dr. William M. Mann, Zoo director, said yesterday.

He's getting the jitters on account of Hannah, the zoo's lady pygmy hippopotamus. Since far back as early March, Dr. Mann and William H. Blackburne, head keeper, have been expecting a little pygmy hippo "any day now."

Hannah has a policy of killing her young as they arrive—three babies have gone that way, one at a time—and her keepers are maintaining a day-and-night vigil to save No. 4 if possible.

A $4,000 beauty, one of the most valuable specimens in the collection, the female hippo has been a local resident since September, 4, 1929. Billie, her mate, was a gift by Harvey Firestone to President Coolidge in June, 1927.

Mr. Blackburne, who has midwived everything from kangaroo rats to elephants, said he doesn't have any particular strategy doped out for Hannah.

"Everything will depend on the circumstances—whether it's night or day, whether there are people in the house or not, and so on," he declared.

He is sure, though, that he won't adopt the suggestion of the Accord Reached.

By Robert C. Albright.

House and Senate conference committees yesterday reached full agreement on a compromise tax bill designed to bring moderate relief to business and still maintain revenue at an estimated $5,330,000,000 level.

The completed measure will be reported to Senate and House as soon as tax draftsmen whip the complicated agreement into bill form. Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley predicted the report will win approval of the Senate "in less than two hours."

Abandonment of the Senate provision for taxing future issues of Federal Government securities, and acceptance of a 25 cents per gallon increase in the Federal liquor tax marked last-minute House victories.

Senate Victorious.

Eleventh-hour Senate triumphs in conference included special tax exemptions for utility holding companies forced into dissolution, a liberalized liquidation period for all corporations voluntarily dissolving and retention of the present estate tax laws.

Chief barriers to agreement were hurdled last week when conferees worked out a narrow application of the undivided profits tax principle —ranging from 16½ per cent on large companies that distribute all earnings to a 19 per cent maximum on those paying out none.

Offsetting this concession to the Administration was virtual acceptance of the Senate's capital gains tax modifications. Only gains realized on assets held less than 18 months would be subject to normal and surtax income rates.

Praised by Harrison.

A flat 20 per cent tax would be levied on gains from property held between 18 months and 2 years. All "long term" gains on assets held over 2 years would be subject to a flat 15 per cent rate.

The tax conference agreement came as the President's proposal for additional legislation removing immunities from Federal, State and local security issues and official salaries encountered first serious hostile reaction.

Paul V. Betters, director of the United States Conference of Mayors, said the President's plan would mean from one-half to 1 per cent higher interest rates on future borrowings of municipalities. This, in turn, he said, would mean higher real estate tax rates, which the "already approaching confiscatory levels."

Recovery Moves.

Sixteen leading industrialists and bankers pledged aid to the President in restoring normal business conditions, as Mr. Roosevelt prepared to confer today with Henry Ford on recovery steps.

Governmental, railroad and labor figures agreed on a 5-point minimum program for this session of Congress to help distressed rail lines.—Page 2.

Aid Pledged.

Aid to "the fullest extent of our ability" in restoring normal business conditions yesterday was pledged President Roosevelt by 16 of the Nation's high-ranking industrialists and bankers.

The business leaders, in a joint statement, promised through consultation and co-operation to work toward Mr. Roosevelt's stated objective of moving "the life of the Nation forward."

The statement was announced through John W. Hanes, a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, as the President prepared to receive Henry Ford at the White House today for a conference on general economic conditions.

Hanes said he personally contacted each of the joint signers independent of White House participation. Sharing in the pledge were such financiers and industrial leaders as Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of General Electric, and Winthrop W. Aldrich, of the Chase National Bank, who played a prominent rôle in its preparation.

Co-operation Stressed.

"The President has clearly indicated that he believes that America's continued prosperity requires closer co-operation between business and Government," read the statement.

"The periods of overproduction to which he referred would be substantially alleviated if the Government engaged in continuous consultation with business leaders and encouraged them to take the initiative to develop and stabilize their respective industries.

"We pledge ourselves to aid to the fullest extent of our ability in such efforts of consultation and co-operation, and we heartily indorse the words of the President, 'Let every one of us work together to move the life of the Nation forward.'"

President to See Ford.

The President told reporters he had read the statement and regarded it as excellent. While resolving "to encourage the President in every effort he shall make to restore confidence and normal business conditions," the pledge made no mention of the Administration's $4,512,000,000 relief and pump-priming program now before Congress. It freely proffered consultative aid, but recommended that "legislation based upon untried social and economic theories should be avoided."

Meanwhile, the White House completed preparations for Ford's business conference with the President today. Others at the conference will be Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., W. J. Cameron, a Ford associate, and Chairman Marriner Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board. The Ford party will arrive by train at 8:50 a. m.

At his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt said he would discuss general economic questions with the pioneer automobile maker. It was

No, the Indians Didn't Stalk Dillinger, Hoover Tells Britain

J. Edgar Hoover talked to Englishmen over the radio yesterday, and made it clear that his G-men do not run around with "blazing machine guns and revolvers in their hands." He also told them that it was not necessary to "call out the Indians" in the pursuit of John Dillinger.

Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, in a speech over the network of the British Broadcasting Corporation, told his listeners across the Atlantic how "Machine Gun" Kelly gave his agents the sobriquet of G-men.

The Federal men, Hoover said, had cornered Kelly in Memphis, Tenn., and were expecting trouble because the outlaw had boasted that, with his machine gun, he would never be taken alive. They rushed into the house where he was hiding, Hoover said, and added:

"They found this braggart cowering in the corner of the room. Like most criminals, when cornered, he showed himself to be a cringing coward. There he was with his hands above his head, crying 'Don't shoot, G-men, don't shoot.' From then on, special agents of the FBI have popularly been referred to as 'G-men,' or Government men."

Hoover, in telling about the hunt for Dillinger, recalled that a Lon-

Borah Assails Huge Navy Bill As Norris Bolts

Fleet Is Sufficient, Idahoan Says, Unless U. S. Wants to Police World.

By Sidney Olson.

The United States does not need to expand its Navy further unless American foreign policy is planned to police the world, Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, said in an hour's address on the "Big Navy" bill yesterday.

The veteran exponent of American non-entanglement in foreign affairs, his once-bushy mane thinned by his 31 years in the Senate, his once-jet eyebrows almost white, threw the full weight of his logic, his experience and his oratory against the President's naval expansion program.

In a field day for the opposition, featured also by the desertion of the New Deal on this issue by Senator George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska, last survivor of the six Senators who voted against the American declaration of war in 1917, Borah's address constituted a major effort to overthrow the Senate's heavy majority for the bill.

Sees No Danger.

Borah's basic point, delivered with telling clarity, was that the United States is in no danger from South America, due to the present especially amicable relationships; from Europe, where a return to "power politics" in the last few weeks has balanced the powers against each other; nor from Asia, where Japan "has all it can possibly handle."

He said: The situation has greatly changed in Europe with reference to the dictators since the pending naval expansion bill was first proposed. The entire situation has changed and as profound a change in international affairs as ever took place within a limited time has taken place in the affairs of Europe since the proposal of this bill.

"Great Britain has swung back to the old balance-of-power idea. She was never at ease under the collective security theory . . .

"We are no longer contemplating the joinder of democracies for the purpose of combating autocracies or dictatorships. We are now dealing with the situation based upon the same principles that have obtained in Europe for the last 250 years."

He insisted that the seizure of Ethiopia by Italy and subsequent "utter disregard of the Covenant of the League of Nations" has "never concerned us in the least as a government."

Passing to Spain he said: "Not only is the seizure of Ethiopia to be approved now, but the dictators are to remain in Spain until they finish their job, until they are victorious, and after they are victorious it is supposed they will go no further.

"One could express himself concerning that proceeding and do so with great sincerity, but it is not necessary in presenting this matter today."

He declared that the world's greatest danger was not fascism or communism but "imperialism." Neither of the first two of these, he said, could be settled by "a navy, whether great or small."

The Senate's orator, sarcastically naming Japan as "the mother of our modern American Navy," traced the history of American naval expansion to show that threats of a huge Japanese navy have many times been used to promote American naval building, although he added that these supposed threats had never materialized.

Fears Tax Load.

Throughout his address Borah made a concurrent point—that while there is no immediate or probable danger to the United States from other nations anywhere, there is, he said, great danger in two factors: beginning a world naval race and imposing an even heavier tax load on the poor people of the world.

He recalled that Secretary Hull said recently that 80 percent of the human family are "living below the danger line." Then he said gravely:

"It is that 80 per cent upon whom we are placing these additional burdens . . . Is there no danger there? There are those who see danger in battleships, danger in territorial questions; but is there no danger when we begin anew to extract from the pockets of the impoverished millions and billions, and millions and billions more?"

With virtually none of the proponents of the measure coming to its defense, Borah and Senators Nye and Frazier, both North Dakota Republicans, and Bone (Democrat), of Washington, all opponents of the measure, conducted the heavily one-sided debate throughout the day.

In the House Representative Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman, House Foreign committee released a letter from the State Department which answered a resoulution by Representative Bryon Scott (Democrat), of California. Scott had sought to have the State Department brand as "treaty violators" the nations, specifically Germany, Italy and Japan, which have overthrown pacts to which this country is party. The department merely referred to previous representations on Italy and Japan but not to Germany.

Working for Washington

Mrs. Roberts Guides Destiny Of 86 D. C. Welfare Agencies

MRS. W. A. ROBERTS.

Executive Secretary of Council Serves as Co-ordinator for Various Units; Started as Volunteer Worker in 1913.

By Christine Sadler

To guide "the head that guides the heart" of the City of Washington is the important job filled by Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies. Eighty-six separate agencies look to the council for guidance in the social work they desire to undertake.

Mrs. Roberts' council knows where the social welfare dollar will do the most good, where the volunteer workers are needed, where the Christmas baskets should go. An agency working through the council is able to co-ordinate its efforts with the needs of the entire District and can feel that the work of its members is constructive and in accord with approved social service methods.

An idea of the scope of such guidance in a city of this size is seen in the fact that the social service exchange division of the organization answers more than 170,000 calls annually.

Do the Footwork.

"We don't spend the money. We merely do the footwork," is the way Mrs. Roberts explains the council's work. And by foutwork, she really means footwork.

Take the spring gardens project sponsored by the council, for instance. Approximately 500 gardens will be planted this spring.

Although the gardens represent one large co-ordinated project, any number of churches, schools, individuals, the WPA, garden clubs and home and garden groups are co-operating. Some furnish the plowing, some the seeds, some the garden implements—and the council furnishes the headwork.

The gardens were part of the council's program long before the WPA made the idea popular as a relief aid. Both for the vegetables they provide for needy families and for the morale they furnish, they are favored projects with Mrs. Roberts.

"It is amazing how much morale come from digging in the earth, how much good it does a family to raise a garden," she declares.

Gardening Her Hobby.

Mrs. Roberts knows about garden raising from first-hand experience, for gardening is her one and only hobby. Her rock garden at her home on Reno road is one of the beauty spots of the city, although she claims that it is really lovely only in the spring. "We put a lot of work into it, and we get much more back than just flowers," she says.

In addition to co-ordinating efforts of different groups, the council looks after the "loose ends" of social service work in the city and nurtures young projects until some group is ready to take them over. Such a project on the council's books now is its work with the blind. During the past year its workers have been making a functional survey and doing case work with every blind person in Washington.

Health, family welfare, child welfare, research and neighborhood councils are the other departments in the big council, which was started in 1922 with only Mrs. Roberts and one secretary as its staff.

Started Work in 1913.

Mrs. Roberts entered social work in 1913 as a volunteer in the old Associated Charities. She must have been good, even then, for she was made a member of the staff and worked there for four years. When the country began to organize its social service in the World War she became assistant executive of the home service section of the Red Cross.

She was born in Lexington, Va., the daughter of Col. Thomas M. Semmes, who occupied the chair of modern languages at V. M. I. Her grandfather, Judge John Brockenbrough, established the first law school at Washington College—now Washington and Lee University. Needless to say, her two sons—Capt. William S. T. Roberts and Archer Roberts—both went to V. M. I. Capt. Roberts also is a graduate of West Point. Both sons are married and have one child each.

"I certainly am a grandmother," Mrs. Roberts exclaims in answer to that important question. "I have a grandson and also a granddaughter."

On Friday—Washington I. Cleveland, manager of District of Columbia Motor Club for the A. A. A., will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Court Told Firm Paid Son of Fess For Senate Lobby

By the Associated Press.

Commissioner Richard H. Ackers, of the United States Court of Claims, heard a Justice Department attorney charge yesterday that a major air line paid $3,000 in 1930 to a son of the late Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, for two days' activity on Capitol Hill.

The attorney, Carl L. Ristine, told reporters he could not recall to which of three sons he referred.

Ristine made the charge in a plea to Ackers to deny suits brought by three aviation companies for $3,110,556 damages allegedly suffered through Postmaster General Farley's cancellation of air mail contracts in 1934. The carriers are Boeing Air Transport, Inc., Pacific Air Transport and United Air Lines Transport Corporation, who asked that damages be awarded for loss of mail carrying compensation.

Senator Fess' son, Ristine declared, was hired by Paul Henderson, vice president of United Aircraft & Transport Corporation, to speed Senate approval of the then pending McNary-Watrous air mail contract bill.

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat hasty, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Roosevelt Bids For Coalition of Liberal Forces

Admits Berle Told Him of Plan to Attend Session With La Follettes.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt told a press conference yesterday the more that liberal forces organize in this country to promote liberal policies the better it would be.

He was responding to an inquiry as to the need for organizing liberal groups for effective political action, aside from the conference of liberals called by Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin to meet at Madison, Wis., tomorrow.

Responding to other questions, the President said A. A. Berle, Assistant Secretary of State, had told him he was going to the La Follette conference. The President said he was going in a personal capacity and not as a representative of the Administration. Mr. Roosevelt added he was not contemplating a message to the conference.

Fall Influence Little.

Gov. La Follette's call is exciting lively interest among legislators seeking to ascertain the potential strength of a national third party.

Although there is little expectation that a new party would have countrywide influence in this year's Congressional elections, members of Congress were divided over the question of whether the timo is ripe for a political realignment.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, asserted that third party talk should wait until it is determined whether President Roosevelt will seek another term.

"The President doesn't want a third term," Norris said, "but if a coalition of Democrats and Republicans in Congress succeeds in blocking his measures, the people will insist that he run again."

Representative O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, has contended that the Madison conference would offer an opportunity for liberals to pledge support to the President for a third term. He said that if Mr. Roosevelt was not renominated by the Democrats, it would be "very wise" for liberals to place him at the head of a new ticket.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, said the time is ripe for a new party. Such a trend has been developing for 20 years, he said, and a "realignment of the political parties is overdue."

Copeland Sees Many Parties.

O'Mahoney said a third party might wield influence in the 1940 elections, but asserted that none could now predict what form a new organization might take.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, who unsuccessfully sought the New York mayorship with the support of Republicans and Conservative Democrats, asserted:

"There is no doubt that there will be a third party. There may be a fourth and a fifth party."

Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, said:

"It is too early to talk about a third party—the only coalition that is likely is one in which Democrats and Republicans vote for each other's candidates in order to get the best man for a job."

London, April 26 (AP).—King George will make an inspection tour by airplane of Royal Air Force airdroms on May 9, it was announced today.

SPECIAL NOTICES

A NEW INVENTION

For the U. S. A., of great importance in the automobile, aeroplane and a large number of other industries, thus a new invention which can be widely used and will provide work for many persons now out of work, is announced.

It is with great pleasure that we announce that a new and very important invention already has been patented in the Patent Office at Washington (PATENT NO. 2117900) OF 1938, which is of great importance for the revival of business, an improvement which may play a great part in the lives of the American people, etc.

By the use of exploitation of this patent a very large field will be opened to industry and the public.

It will be possible therewith to improve the quality of various types of products at relatively low cost.

This invention is patented by MR. DIMITER IVANOFF OUSHEFF, CHEMICAL ENGINEER, a gentleman of ability and intelligence, a young man of large acquaintence in the chemical profession.

Mr. Ousheff came to America in the year 1937. His native land is Bulgaria. He will remain in this country. The U. S. A. is his new fatherland; he has received his first citizenship papers and awaits the second and final papers. He has been occupied with this invention and at the same time with others for five years continuously and has invested and spent large sums of money for material and apparatus, and has overcome many difficulties thereby.

In the "Old Country," Europe, the political and economical conditions are very unfavorable to the exploitation of inventions.

Mr. Ousheff has come to America to stay, and has stated to friends and colleagues in his profession: "This land of America is worthy of true admiration and honor and I am very happy to be here with my inventions, and will do all possible to acquit myself honorably in this, my new fatherland!" . . . etc., etc.

For the use and exploitation of all inventions and patents of Mr. Ousheff there is now being organized a large company of very great industrial importance, which will begin to function in a short time in accordance with the statements of Mr. Ousheff as to this invention and also for all others, the by-products or primary products are of type now unusable, such as those of agricultural raw materials, the by-products of various other industries, taken directly from the soil, as well as entirely independent of those of other countries, such as Europe and, in a word, of the entire world. All the by-products are now almost worthless.

Relative to these very important and interesting patents and inventions of this able chemist-engineer, Mr. Ousheff, we shall have the pleasure of returning and giving more details, particularly as to the individual patents and inventions.

The Gallup Poll

Removal of Restrictions on Business Favored by Public as President Prepares to Consult Ford.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, April 26.—As President Roosevelt prepares to meet Henry Ford at the White House tomorrow to discuss ways and means of bringing about business recovery, thousands of voters throughout the Nation have been asked in a survey: "If you were in President Roosevelt's place, what would you do to fight the depression?"

George Gallup.

The survey, conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, found that one-half of the voters would not know what to do. But the answers of the other half reveal a significant gravitation of opinion toward one idea: the Government should let business alone; that is, remove restrictions on business initiative and try to restore confidence.

The number of persons who expressed this sentiment was far greater than the number who favor the New Deal's proposed spending and lending "cure" for the trade slump.

The voters offered scores of solutions which ran all the way from reviving the NRA to enacting the Townsend Plan. But the largest number of answers clustered around the following suggestions, in the order shown:

What Would You Do to Fight Depression?

1. Remove restrictions on business initiative, such as high taxes.
2. Reduce Government spending and try to balance the budget.
3. Increase Government spending.

The removal of restrictions on business received more than twice as many votes as any of the other leading suggestions. This fact would seem to indicate that business has risen in public esteem since the recession set in.

Conversely, the public has apparently never been "sold" on the idea of Federal pump priming. Several recent Institute surveys have shown that only a minority favor trying to spend our way to prosperity. The majority say that any recovery achieved that way would probably be short-lived and artificial.

The present survey found that about as many Democrats as Republicans have opinions on combating the depression. The difference is that Republican sentiment is more unified. Approximately half of Republican voters who expressed an opinion were for a program of lifting restrictions on business, whereas only about one-fifth of Democrats were agreed on this policy. The rest of the Democrats favored many diverse suggestions, with no one proposal commanding more than 15 per cent of the vote. Increased spending received prominent mention, as did tax reduction and revival of the NRA.

Sentiment for letting business alone was found to be strongest in the upper and middle income groups in the voting population, as might be expected. A large number of voters in the lower-income group, on the other hand, said they are for the Roosevelt spending program. This is probably because, as Institute surveys have shown, the President is particularly popular with poor voters, and also because spending for unemployment relief will help the poor man's lot.

It's a Depression, Not a Recession, Voters Say.

New York, April 26.—With commentators scratching their heads over whether to call the present trade slump a depression or a recession, an Institute survey finds that the public's mind is made up. It's a depression.

This is the term favored by a sizable majority of the voters throughout the Nation who were asked: "Would you call the present state of business a recession or a depression?"

The vote:

Recession	42%
Depression	58

With a Democratic administration in the White House, Republican voters make no bones about calling the slump a depression. Democratic voters are more reserved. Half of them call it a depression, the other half a recession.

The vote:

	Recession	Depression
Republicans	28%	72%
Democrats	50	50

Neely Proposes Seven Changes In Civil Service

Agrees With Unions That Retirement Ages Should Go Down.

Seven changes in the civil service retirement act were proposed to the Senate yesterday by Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, upon behalf of the Civil Service Committee as the House Civil Service Committee opened hearings on bills to amend the act.

Neely said that the Civil Service Commission favors all of the changes save the one which proposes to reduce the ages for optional retirement after 30 years' service to 64, 60 and 58 years. The present retirement ages are 68, 63 and 60.

Senator Neely said he would press for passage of the legislation at this session.

The bill proposes the following changes in the retirement act.

Three one-year extensions of appointments beyond the retirement age when approved by the Civil Service Commission.

Provides an employe with a choice of two joint-suvivorship annuity plans, usually referred to as "widow's annunity."

Extends from 90 days to 12 months the period which an employe may be retained on the retirement roll after complete recovery from a disability while he is trying to get reinstated in the service.

Permits employes to deposit additional amounts of from 1 to 10 per cent of their salaries with the Government for additional annunities. The deposits would draw 3 per cent compounded annually.

Changes the existing law for returning salary deductions to an employe when he leaves the service.

The House Civil Service Committee today will continue hearings on the varied House bills.

Lamont Denies Duty to Expose Whitney Theft

Morgan Partner Says He Felt No Obligation to Tell on Broker.

By the Associated Press.

Thomas W. Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., told the Securities Commission yesterday that he felt no obligation to report Richard Whitney's misuse of customers' securities to the New York Stock Exchange or to public authorities.

Lamont was a witness at the commission's examination of the failure of the New York brokerage house of Richard Whitney & Co.

Made "Terrible Mistake."

Testifying in a crowded hearing room, Lamont said:

"Here was a question of a man in whom we had utmost confidence. He had made a terrible mistake. His brother was going to help him."

Explaining that he had "moved as my heart dictated," Lamont described his reactions after he had loaned $1,082,000 to his partner, George Whitney, brother of the bankrupt brokerage house head.

George Whitney, in turn, lent the money to Richard to help him restore portions of the stock exchange gratuity fund which he had kept in his possession for nine months.

Never Occurred to Him.

"It never occurred to me that I should butt in and denounce Richard Whitney, nor that I should run to the stock exchange authorities when they have all the machinery in the world . . . I felt it should be taken care of in other ways and that it was not up to me."

"Did you feel you should have gone to the exchange or public authorities and tell them the facts?" asked Gerhard A. Gesell, commission attorney.

"No," replied Lamont.

During a discussion of the loan he made to George Whitney, the Morgan partner asked Mr. Gesell:

"Did you expect me to lend the money and then ask George to trot down to the district attorney and denounce his brother?"

"No," the attorney said.

Felt His Duty Done.

After Mr. Gesell questioned the banker repeatedly on whether he should have reported Richard Whitney's misconduct, Mr. Lamont said:

"I don't know whether you're reading me a lecture, Mr. Gesell . . . but I felt I had done my duty."

Mr. Gesel then asked the witness what would have been his reaction had he known the Mayor of New York had misused relief funds.

"That's a theoretical question and I'm not interested," the witness answered.

Mr. Lamont said he had had the utmost confidence in Richard Whitney and that the news of his failure "came as the greatest shock in the world."

"Even after he had stolen $1,000,000 of securities?" Mr. Gesell asked.

"I don't think I ever put it in the terms you are using now. You used the world 'stealing,'" Lamont replied.

"It never occurred to me Richard Whitney was a thief. It made me ill almost that he could have been deceiving his brother, his wife and the community."

Weighed Human Factors.

At one point the witness said:

"If I'd been a lawyer I might have gone into the matter further. But there was a human equation in it."

"Did George Whitney tell you to keep the matter secret?" Gesell acked.

"No, he didn't," said Lamont.

"Did you have anything to do with the liquidation of Richard Whitney & Co?" inquired Gesell.

"Absolutely nothing," Lamont responded.

Earlier Arthur M. Anderson, another Morgan partner, said he regarded as a "slow loan" an unsecured advance of $500,000 made to Richard Whitney by the Morgan banking house in June 1931.

Gesell asked Anderson whether he had believed Whitney could have paid back the loan.

"I think it is a fair statement that he could have paid it but it would have cramped his style somewhat," Anderson replied.

Whitney Makes Good With Mop.

Ossining, N. Y., April 26 (AP).—Richard Whitney, ex-broker, graduated from the rookie class at Sing Sing prison today to become a full-fledged convict and got his first job—cleaning and mopping floors in the ancient cell block where he is confined.

Prison attendants said Whitney, before his removal today to a new cell, higher in the old block, cleaned and scrubbed the walls of the cell he has occupied and did the job with the thoroughness of a good porter.

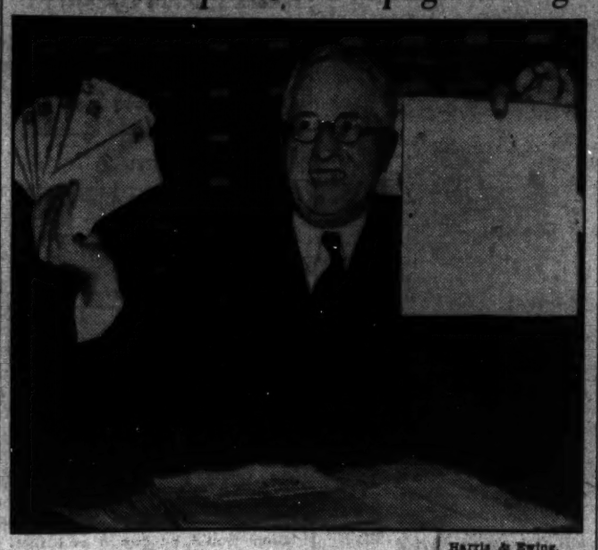
Accuses Hopkins of Propagandizing



Harris & Ewing.

Displaying a batch of letters received in his first mail yesterday, Representative John Taber, New York Republican, accused WPA Administrator Hopkins of inspiring "chain letter propaganda" in favor of the President's pump-priming program. "On the bottom of some of the letters," Taber said, "was a line stating 'Make one copy for your Congressman and send this to four other persons.'"

Los Angeles Scientist Is Here On Way to Lecture in Europe

Dr. Ruth Drown Will Exhibit Device Intended to Photograph Body Tissue as X-Ray Does the Bones.

Dr. Ruth Drown, of Los Angeles, who was in Washington over the week-end, is on her way to Europe to demonstrate before medical groups there an instrument by which she believes it is possible to photograph the soft tissue of the body. She has been working on it since 1935 and it will not be released until her experiments are complete, she says.

Dr. Drown explained that her instrument "tunes in" on any part of the body of which a picture is desired and is developed on the principle of the radio, rather than the X-ray. It makes use of the "life force" of the body to photograph it. Every part of the body gives forth its own rate of vibration, she said.

The medical profession has needed for many years, pictures of the soft tissue as well as of the bone structure which the X-ray photographs.

Dr. Drown demonstrated the device last September before the meeting of the Medical Physical Research Association in Chicago, following a banquet, and the audience kept her answering questions and carrying on her demonstrations until 1 o'clock in the morning.

She left Washington last night, accompanied by Mrs. Edward J. Gage, widow of the Secretary of the Treasury in McKinley's administration. Mrs. Gage is among those who have seen Dr. Drown demonstrate her instrument and has been photographed by it. They will sail together aboard the Hamburg from New York on Wednesday, Dr. Drown going to London and Mrs. Gage to France.

Policemen Accept Numbers Bets in Raid on Northside

Police said they took numbers bets over a telephone in the 1400 block North Capitol street yesterday while they were waiting to take a man and his wife to headquarters in connection with a lottery case.

Mr. and Mrs. Pincus Fox, were released under $1,500 bond each on charges of operating a lottery.

The raiders had a search warrant for the tailor and haberdashery shop run by the couple. Several hundred alleged numbers slips and marked money were seized, police said.

A loaded revolver was found in the store.

2 Va. Police Face Trial June 27 for D. C. Man's Death

Policemen Edwin Scheid and Herbert Knox, of Falls Church, Va., charged jointly with the murder of Theodore Daugherty, Washington musician, will be tried separately beginning June 27, Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of the Arlington County Circuit Court, announced yesterday. Scheid will be tried first.

The officers—Scheid is 23 and Knox 24—are charged with killing Daugherty, 31, on the morning of March 30. They said that when they sought to question him, he threw his automobile into gear and sped through Fairfax and Arlington counties until, at Cherrydale, he was fatally wounded.

Waitress Pay Raised in Cafes That Ban Tips

Minimum for Them Will Be $16.50, as Against $13.25 for Others.

Waitresses in restaurants having an antitipping policy will receive a minimum wage of $16.50 per week, as compared with $13.25 per week for other waitresses, the Minimum Wage Board ruled yesterday.

At the same time the board distributed more than 3,000 copies of the public housekeeping occupation minimum wage order, effective May 8, to all employers in Washington.

More than 8,000 women in hotels, restaurants and allied industries will be affected by the new rates. For each standard workweek of 36 to 48 hours, waitresses will receive not less than $13.25 per week. If employed for less than 36 hours per week or less than the standard workweek of their establishments, not less than 40 cents per hour.

During the conferences to establish a basic wage for waitresses much controversy resulted from the proposal by the employers to include tips in the determination of the minimum wage. The board ruled, however, that "in no case shall gratuities or tips be included as any part of wages fixed in the order."

The ruling providing a higher wage for waitresses in restaurants with a no-tipping policy came about when the board discovered these employes would not receive a wage on parity with those waitresses who received tips. This grouping included soda fountain girls, Y. W. C. A. cafeteria, a large hotel and other restaurants in the District.

The highest wage granted to employes under this order was $17 per week. This wage will be guaranteed to telephone operators, hatcheck girls, elevator operators, cashiers, clerical workers and similar workers.

The board allowed reduction from the basic rate for each "bona fide" meal furnished by the employer when an employe is on the employer's premises as condition of employment." The deduction must not exceed 30 cents for each meal, the board ruled.

New York, April 26 (AP).—Prince Alexis Dawydoff, 35, exiled scion of Russian nobility, was under arrest in the prison ward of Bellevue Hospital today, charged with automobile homicide after his car had jumped a Fifth avenue curb causing the death of one woman and injuries to himself and a second woman companion.

Mrs. Margaret Abrams, 22, wife of James Abrams, executive of a bond brokerage firm, was fatally injured when thrown from the car. Mrs. Zinovia Manning, 36, the other passenger, was cut and bruised as was Prince Alexis.

Dawydoff, son of Princess Marie Obolensky, is a magazine editor.

Father Who Tried To Retrieve 2 Girls Freed With Flier

Nassau, Bahamas, April 26 (AP).—Forrester Scott, Philadelphia lawyer, and Stanley Boynton, aviator, were acquitted today of attempted kidnaping.

The two were accused of attempting March 16 to seize Scott's daughters, Eve and Zoe, and fly them back to the United States. The children had been brought here by Scott's former wife, now Mrs. Harry Clark Boden.

The presiding justice directed the acquittal on the ground that Mrs. Boden's testimony was inadmissible because British law does not recognize her Reno divorce. A wife may not testify against her husband.

Lawyer Burns Self to Death To Avoid Trial

Robert G. Timberlake, 35, Was to Face Charge of Forgery.

Less than an hour before he was to appear in District Court on a forgery charge, Robert Grantland Timberlake, 35, 1415 T street southeast, yesterday saturated his clothing with gasoline and touched his own funeral pyre.

His clothing was ablaze when he was found shortly before 11 a. m. on the sidewalk near the railroad siding just off New Jersey avenue southeast. Leon Abraham, employe of a car-loading company, covered the man with a piece of canvas and extinguished the blaze.

Taken to Casualty Hospital, Timberlake was dead on arrival.

Stella and Ellis Robinson, colored, 1263 First street southeast, were the first to notice Timberlake. He rolled down a railroad embankment, a mass of flames before they could reach him. They summoned fire apparatus, but Abraham had put out the flames before it arrived.

Timberlake, employed as an investigator by a local attorney, left his home yesterday after telling his wife he was going to court. He purchased a half-gallon of gasoline at a filling station at 453 New Jersey avenue southeast, telling Wilbur Baxter, station employe, that he wanted the fuel for his automobile.

A few minutes afterward, Timberlake returned to the station, according to Baxter, and requested a larger can because the first one would not reach behind his spare tire to the gas tank. Timberlake's wife, Louise, told police her husband did not own an automobile.

Timberlake was scheduled to appear in court in connection with a forgery indictment. He was arrested in January for allegedly passing a bad check for more than $300. The man was arrested again in February for firing several shots in the office of former Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

Detective Sergt. Clyde N. Strange, of the Homicide Squad, said several letters were found in Timberlake's pockets, but none indicated he intended taking his own life.

Mrs. Timberlake stated her husband has been in ill health. The couple have no children.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Boy Who Killed Mother Sobs at 14-Year Term

Slayer, 16, Shudders as Judge Finds Him Guilty of Murder.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 26.—Teddy Danielsen, 16, shuddered and sobbed today when he was sentenced to 14 years in prison for slaying his crippled mother with a bread knife.

The pale and slender lad, portrayed as an "average high school boy" by his counsel, sat tense while Chief Justice Cornelius Harrington of the Criminal Court terminated a review with this verdict:

"I find the defendant guilty of murder."

Teddy blinked. His lips twitched. A capacity crowd lapsed into an expectant rush. The boy and his father, Theodore, sr., walked to the bench.

The jurist, obviously harried by the task of reaching a decision alone since the trial was heard without a jury, asked the youth if he had anything to say.

"Your honor, I always loved my father and mother," Terry stated. "I want to go back."

The judge then pronounced the penalty.

The elder Danielsen and his only child wept. They embraced briefly. Bailiffs parted them and led the youngster to his cell.

The boy drove a 9-inch knife into his mother's throat last March 3 after she shook and scratched him because he played hookey.

Robert McLean Succeeds Noyes As Head of AP

President of Philadelphia Bulletin Has Been Director Since 1924.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—Robert McLean, president of the Philadelphia Bulletin, today was elected president of the Associated Press.

He succeeds Frank B. Noyes, president of the Washington Star, who retired yesterday after serving in that office for 38 years.

The board of directors elected W. H. Cowles of the Spokane Spokesman-Review first vice president, and Paul Patterson of the Baltimore Sun second vice president.

Other officers, including the executive board, were re-elected.

McLean became a member of the Bulletin staff in 1913, after he was graduated from Princeton University with a bachelor of literature degree.

Upon the death of his father, the late William L. McLean, in 1931, he became president of the Bulletin, which the family bought in 1895. He has served as a director of the Associated Press since 1924. For the past year he has been first vice president of the Associated Press.

The new president lives in Fort Washington, Pa., and is a member of the Union League, Rittenhouse and Princeton clubs in Philadelphia. He married Clare Randolph Goode in Baltimore April 28, 1919.

At another New York meting, publishers of the Nation's smaller newspares were urged by James G. Stahlman, of the Nashville, Tenn., Banner, today to be alert to what he described as repeated attempts to "hamstring the American press."

Stahlman, opening the fifty-second annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, of which he is president, said he had been "astounded at the unconcern expressed by many publishers of smaller newspapers toward encroachments which are gradually being made on a free press."

Under direction of Verne E. Joy, of the Centralia, Ill., Sentinel, the publishers, editors and other executives attending the closed session turned to a discussion of problems affecting newspapers of 50,000 circulation or less. The competition of radio advertising was the dominant issue.

Tale of Indians Is All Baloney, Hoover Declares

don newspaper reporter had called him on the transatlantic telephone and asked, "What are you going to do to find Dillinger?"

Denies Machine Guns.

"I told him," said Hoover, "that every lead and every clue was being carefully investigated, and then he asked in all seriousness, 'Are you going to call out the Indians?'

"In all probability many of you, as my own countrymen so often do, visualize the G-men as a group of men pursuing criminals with blazing machine guns and revolvers in their hands. This is not exactly the case. It hardly gives a proper picture of a G-man's daily routine.

"They must, of course, know how to shoot and shoot straight, but only when their lives are in danger. In the last four years nearly 16,000 dangerous criminals have been apprehended and convicted in cases coming under the jurisdiction of the FBI. During these four years, however, it has been necessary to take the lives of only 11 criminals, and then not until the criminals had resorted to the use of firearms or resisted arrest and the lives of our men were in jeopardy."

Explains Co-operation.

Hoover told the Britishers how co-operation between the FBI and Scotland Yard often leads to the apprehension of criminals. Eighteen years ago, he said, a criminal named Robert Green was sent to the Colorado State Penitentiary. He escaped and for years nothing was heard about him. Then in England a man giving the name of Thomas Walker was arrested for violation of the immigration laws and sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment.

"Under ordinary conditions," Hoover said, "that would have been the end of Thomas Walker, but through the system of international exchange of fingerprints, there was an entirely different finish to the story. For the officials of New Scotland Yard, following the usual custom, forwarded Walker's fingerprints to Washington, where they were classified and searched through our files. They were identified with a card, bearing the telltale red insignia which denoted that there was a wanted man. He was Robert Green."

Ft. Meade Range House Burned, Loss Is $2,000

Fort Meade, Md., April 26.—The range house at the Fort Meade rifle range burned tonight with loss estimated at $2,000. Contents of the house were chiefly rifle targets.

Men of the Twelfth Infantry, quartered in tents near the range house, prevented spread of the fire to their camp.

decided to learn more about group work when the G. H. A. was started and the opportunity presented itself," he said. "After nearly six months in that field I have made up my mind that I like private practice best."

Last week Dr. Henry Rolf Brown disclosed he had resigned April 13, effective April 30, as medical director. Dr. Hulburt's resignation took effect immediately.

In a speech accompanying the twin resolutions, Shafer, referring to the resignation of Dr. Brown, declared:

"The fact is, Dr. Brown resigned for reasons that he will state only to a Congressional committee. They are vital reasons. Very obviously things are going on in Group Health Association in which he refused to be involved further."

Shafer said the District Medical Society tried in vain to reach an understanding with G. H. A. before the latter's program was begun. Three weeks ago, he said, it invited group health officials to a conference, but no reply had been received.

"Something is very wrong in Group Health Association," Shafer told the House. "If this organization really has an idealistic purpose, as it claims, and if it really is motivated by a desire to improve the health of Government employes, and not by selfish promotional desires of a few people, why does it refuse to reorganize in conformity with the rulings of the corporation counsel and the United States district attorney?"

HOLC officials said the ranks of leading physicians in various parts of the country are being combed for a permanent successor to Dr. Brown.

of the Department of Commerce, opposite the Willard Hotel.

Here a mass meeting will be held and speeches broadcast over a Nation-wide radio hookup.

Speakers will include a representative Government worker, a representative District businessman, a representative District professional man and a representative of labor.

"We hope to make this demonstration the greatest of its kind ever held here," said a spokesman for the Board of Commerce.

Meanwhile, appointment of 59 of the 61 precinct chairman for the suffrage referendum was announced at headquarters of the Citizens' Conference for District Suffrage.

Vote on Two Questions.

It was explained the others would be named shortly by the elections' committee, headed by William H. Mondell and Harry N. Stull.

These chairmen will have charge of voting places and precincts. Ballot boxes will be located in schoolhouses in the 63 precincts into which the Capital is divided.

Every resident 21 years of age and older has been urged to go to the polls and demand the right of franchise for the District.

Time for voting will be between 9 a. m. and 9 p. m. on the two questions—national representation and local suffrage.

Confidence that Washingtonians will roll up a huge vote in favor of both questions was expressed yesterday by Wilbur S. Finch, president, and Stull, vice president, of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association.

Citizens associations pushed their drives to produce 100 per cent voting strength in their areas.

Two groups which met last night—the Logan-Thomas Circle and the Southeast Associations—urged a complete turnout and issued instructions on where balloting would take place in their neighborhoods.

Members of the Manor Park Citizens Association were urged by their executive committee, meeting last night at the home of George A. Corbin, president, 218 Peabody street northwest, to vote in the suffrage plebiscite. The committee indorsed the referendum as giving District residents an opportunity to express their views fully on the suffrage question.

LaGuardia Urges 'Politics Holiday, Clear Thinking'

Wichita Falls, Tex., April 26 (AP).—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York called for uniform working conditions throughout the Nation and a better exchange of rural and urban viewpoints today in an address in which he attributed economic difficulties to lack of purchasing power rather than over production.

Speaking to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, LaGuardia appealed for a "breathing spell" from politics and "intelligent thinking" to meet a situation he said was "more serious than in 1917."

Dr. O. B. Kiel, of Wichita Falls, the mayor's host, asserted that LaGuardia had a bigger job awaiting him in Washington and could do for all the country what he had done for New York. LaGuardia smilingly remarked "Don't you worry about my going to Washington. "By the time I get through with this speech nobody will be for me," he said. "Besides I have a contract with the people of New York for three more years."

Observing that the country has been "conferenced to death," LaGuardia said that "we cannot continue indefinitely a relief program that is costing more than a billion dollars," but added it could not be cut off suddenly.

under prison and weather conditions described as "intolerable," unable to obtain a hearing, or to obtain release on bond despite offers by Chihuahau businessmen until intervention by American friends resulted successfully a few days ago.

Monday afternoon, after repeated inquiries directed toward the Mexican government, and to the State Department here, the Mexican Ambassador notified the State Department that Fink had been ordered released unconditionally, because of lack of evidence.

Hearing Tomorrow.

Late Tuesday, according to the Associated Press, Judge Elias Fierro Oaxaca, of the Chihuahua State Penal Court, before whom Fink had been arraigned, announced:

"Mr. Fink has not been released in any sense of the word. He still is within the jurisdiction of the court. He must stay in Chihuahua City until the hearing for a writ of amparo is held Thursday."

Officials at the Mexican Embassy said yesterday their notice of Fink's unconditional release had been received from Mexico City, adding that later information had confirmed that he was simply released on bond.

One official said that Fink might be granted one type of final amparo (habeas corpus), which would clear him completely, but that this ruling might be contested and carried to the Supreme Court of Mexico.

A conditional writ of amparo, he added, would simply pass on the legality of the proceedings against Fink. He was uncertain whether the penal code of Chihuahua state would permit the death penalty for Fink if he should be convicted of having a share in the bombing.

Senor Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najero, Mexican Ambassador, would make no official comment on the case.

Many Protests Made.

Fink, vice president and general manager of the Maguarichio Mining Co., with extensive gold mining properties, will be heard before the Mexican Federal District Court.

Fink's detention brought a flood of protests into Washington and into Mexico City. Employes of the mining company, more than 1,500 of them, held a mass meeting and drew up a formal protest which they sent to Gov. Gustave Falamantes, of Chihuahua State.

Friends of the imprisoned man were quoted in Texas newspapers as charging that Fink's arrest was one step in a drive to seize control of American industrial properties in Mexico.

Mexican Federal government officials were reported to be seriously "concerned" over the incident, and plans for an investigation were announced.

Officials of the State Department said yesterday they had been in constant touch with the case through L. R. Blohm, American consul in Chihuahua City, and that efforts were being continued to obtain Fink's release.

Legislators Interested.

Among the Texas Congressmen who have been active in seeking Fink's release are Senator Morris Sheppard and Representatives Maury Maverick and Ewing Thomason.

Senator Sheppard expressed confidence last night that the State Department was making every possible effort to protect Fink.

Representative Maverick acted on the case following a plea from his brother-in-law, Murray F. Crosette, close friend of Fink for more than 20 years.

He said the mining man was "very quiet and unassuming," and had never been involved in any "rough" dealings. He declared he was sure that Fink would receive the best legal attention.

Representative Thomason, personal friend of Fink, said he was "absolutely convinced" the mining man could not have been involved in the crime. Describing Fink's arrest as a "frameup," Thomason said "I hope and believe he soon will be given his unconditional release."

"If you want to save that hippo just wave a blow torch in its mother's face. Animals don't like fire and retreat from it."

The headkeeper isn't exactly optimistic but he thinks the 100-pound bundle of hippo—that is what infant pygmies average, compared with 70 pounds for the full-sized variety—will have a better chance for survival than the three who came before.

"Hannah has been happier and better dispositioned in her new quarters than she was in the lion house," said Mr. Blackburne. "She is good tempered and cooperates with her keepers. If she just stays that way, we'll be showing off a young pygmy hippo soon."

Margiotti Says Brewers Gave McCloskeyCash

ularities" before him were so important that he was canceling all engagements and returning to Harrisburg.

Margiotti told a mass meeting:

"In 1935 legislation to regulate the distribution and sale of beer was introduced, providing that brewers must get cash for beer, and for a $900 license fee for distributors of out of State beer and $400 license for distributors of local beer.

"Certain brewers were interested in having the legislation passed. They wanted a monopoly.

"An attorney for these interests was told by McCloskey and David Lawrence that for $20,000 the legislation would be passed and they would be given what they wanted.

"The legislation passed in the form desired.

"Then in June, 1935, at the direction of McCloskey and Lawrence, the attorney representing these interests met Ralph M. Bashore, secretary of the Democratic State Committee in the Adelphia Hotel in Philadelphia and paid him $10,000 in cash.

"Later, this same attorney met Lawrence and paid him the balance in cash. These payments were made for the passage of the beer bills."

Margiotti said his investigators had determined "beyond any doubt" that Gov. George H. Earle had "absolutely no knowledge of these transactions."

Philadelphia, April 26 (AP).—Secretary of Labor and Industry Ralph M. Bashore tonight termed "an unmitigated lie" Attorney General Margiotti's assertion that Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence and Matthew McCloskey, Philadelphia's contractor, were paid $30,000 cash for "favorable" State legislation.

At Scranton, Lawrence said "there's absolutely no truth to it."

"Of course it isn't true," Lawrence said. "I can't understand where the attorney general got that idea. However, I shall not make any comment until I have a chance to read the speech."

British Income Taxed 27½% For Arms Load

2,000,000 'Little Men' Not Affected by Income Levy Increase.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 26.—Great Britain hiked her income tax from 25 per cent to a staggering 27½ per cent today to help balance a gun-swollen budget that is the biggest in peacetime history.

Vast, secret food purchases—wheat, whale oil for margarine, and sugar—to feed Britain's people for the "early months" of a war were disclosed by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, who announced to the House of Commons that the government needs 944,389,000 pounds ($4,721,990,000) for the year ending March 31, 1939.

The gap between arms expenses and expected income is to be filled by the 2½ per cent income tax increase, which won't hit the little fellow, and by tea and oil duty boosts which will.

Sir John, who declared "the load we have to bear" will be carried with the "dogged determination and dauntless courage of the British race," warned that the peak year of defense expenditure would not be reached until next year, possibly the year after.

Highest in 17 Years.

The income tax of five shillings sixpence to the pound ($1.375 per $5.00) becomes the highest in 17 years, since the 1921-1922 peak of six shillings of the pound, or 30 per cent.

Total government needs were set at 81,500,000 pounds ($407,500,000) over last year.

The budget did not cover the whole of the huge arms bill, the five-year cost of which orinigally was set at $7,500,000,000, and later estimated unofficially at $11,250,000,000. It provided for $1,226,250,000 for armaments expenditures, but left out an extra $450,000,000 which is to be borrowed.

Meanwhile, Anthony Eden warned Britain that "sacrifices" were necessary to meet the achievements of the dictator-ruled nations if liberty and democracy were to be preserved.

United Front Held Need.

Ending the two months political retirement which followed his resignation as foreign secretary February 20, he addressed a dinner of the Royal Society of St. George honoring England's patron saint. The speech was broadcast to the United States.

"I am a convinced believer in democracy, yet it would be foolish, perhaps fatal, to the very survival of democracy to ignore the stupendous achievements realized under other formers of government," he said. "A united effort for the spiritual and material refreshment of the nation is the need of the hour."

As it presented the budget, the government tried vainly to silence Commons critics of the air rearmament lag by promising "maximum production from all factories that can be turned to plane making within two years.

Tariffs Increased.

After a brief opposition attack, charging that the budget was not balanced, Commons adopted resolutions implementing the tea, oil and income tax increases.

Clement R. Attlee, leader of the Labor opposition, declared that "in the foreign policy on which we have now embarked, there is no question of disarmament or securing security—we are entering on a race in armaments in a world of armed anarchy."

The tea tax increased, from the present 4 pence to 6 pence (12 cents) a pound, will hit nearly every home in the land. It becomes effective tomorrow.

Gasoline, which now costs about 37 cents a gallon, with a tax of 16 cents, will have a tax of 18 cents, effective tonight. It applies also to heavy oil and light hydrocarbon oils.

Low Brackets Not Raised.

Two million small income taxpayers were granted a concession. Everyone in the United Kingdom who earns $750 a year or more pays income tax, but the rates will remain the same for single persons making up to $1,450 and married men with one child earning up to $2,000.

Heavy industries engaged in rearmament work likewise were granted a concession, the depreciation allowance they may deduct from total profit being increased from 10 to 20 per cent.

Financial quarters were bitterly disappointed in the budget. Leading shares declined sharply in after hours trading. Oil shares fell sharply.

The income tax increase caused grumbling even among conservatives—off the floor of Commons. Politicians predicted the reaction of the public would be bad, and said the budget indicated the government was not planning to order a general election this fall.

Plane "Pool" to Be Topic.

London, April 26 (U.P.).—Creation of a large "pool" of British and French fighting planes, to be rushed to any vital point in event of war, will be an important topic of the Anglo-French discussions opening in London Thursday, it was reported tonight.

The financing of the proposed joint Anglo-French air fleet, to compete with the aerial armadas of Germany and Italy, will be discussed by Prime Minister Chamberlain and French Premier Daladier during two days of discussions.

way for insurgent control of the plains northwest of Valencia, Franco's next big objective.

As heavy insurgent forces advanced southward over mountain roads upon the key highway town of Cantavieja, communications junction 46 miles inland from Gen. Franco's coastal base at Vinaroz, insurgent quarters said loyalist authorities were preparing to abandon Madrid.

Dead Strew Roads.

Officials at Franco's Zaragoza base reported the seizure of a truckload of heavy cases believed to contain securities from Madrid banks.

The haul, seized on the Benicarlo-Vinaroz road on April 15, indicated to the nationalists that the loyalist authorities feared the complete isolation of Madrid by Franco's swift thrust southward along the coast toward Castellon and Valencia.

Fleets of Franco's planes bombed and "strafed" the loyalist defenders into retreat along the road between Aguilar and Camarillas leading south to the ruined city of Teruel.

Roads between Teruel and the sea were reported strewn with dead.

During the last three days the insurgents have conquered nearly 350 square miles, driving loyalists from positions they had held since the Alfambra River battle in January.

The fall of Cantavieja, directly east of Madrid toward the seacoast, would give Franco domination of an area from which rapid progress might be made south along the coast without fear of rear or flank attacks.

U. S. Fighter Slain.

Valencia, April 26 (AP).—American Vice Consul Lee Dorley today received confirmation of the death of Philip Detro, 26, of Conroe, Tex., a captain in the Washington-Lincoln Battalion of the International Brigade.

Detro, a former student at the University of Missouri, was wounded at Teruel January 19 and died April 10.

Hospital Train Bombed.

Valencia, April 26 (AP).—Delayed reports of an insurgent aerial attack on a government hospital train April 14 today were brought to Valencia by wounded American and Canadian members of the International Brigade.

Ten persons, including a woman, were killed in the moonlight raid of a lone insurgent bomber along the Mediterranean coast.

Six of the 30 Americans aboard the crowded hospital train were reinjured in the attack and others in subsequent bombings at Castellon de la Plana, where they were taken after the train was wrecked.

Eight bombs were dropped on the hospital train. The raiding plane then swooped low to machine-gun convalescents attempting to flee to cover.

Americans aboard said the train had large Red Cross markings on the tops and sides of all hospital cars. They said the moonlight was so bright they could distinguish the features of the insurgent plane's crew.

Nazis 'Insulted' At Offers for 'Purged' Books

Vienna, April 26 (AP).—An official of the Vienna National Library said today a number of foreign collectors have offered to buy from state institutions books declared illegal under the Nazi regime.

"Such offers, however, are an insult to the country and consequently were rejected," the official said angrily.

"The National Library has no intention to sell or destroy any of its volumes, legal or not."

He explained that works to be hidden from the public eye are to be transferred to special rooms where they will be carefully preserved.

[Borough President Raymond V. Ingersoll, of Brooklyn, N.Y., recently sent a cablegram to the National Library in Vienna offering to pay transportation costs for the prescribed volumes.

[Information received by Ingersoll said a number of books destined for destruction included volumes written by Jews and "liberals."]

Cable Sent to Hitler.

Princeton, N. J., April 26 (AP).—A movement to add to libraries of this nation volumes in Vienna's National Library that Hitler would burn because they are "non-Aryan" was started today at Princeton and Yale Universities.

In half-serious vein, Editor James McC. Clarke of the Daily Princetonian had sent a cablegram to Hitler asking the German Chancellor to give to the university library books he intended to "purge."

Japanese Drive Perils Flank of Taierhchwang

Attack Breaks Through but Chinese Plug Line at Hsiaowang.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), April 27. Japanese fighting southward toward the vital railroad junction at Suchow broke through Chinese lines today at Hsiaowang, a village southeast of Yihsien, but the Chinese swiftly counterattacked and temporarily plugged the hole.

Despite greatly increased Japanese pressure all along the south Shantung battlefront and continued heavy fighting, relative positions were unchanged except at Hsiaowang.

The break through at this point, however, put the Japanese in position to outflank defenders of Taierhchwang if they can continue driving forward. Taierhchwang is 45 miles northeast of Suchow, where the East-West Lunghai Railway crosses the Tientsin-Pukow line.

Japanese Start Diversion.

Chinese dispatches from Hankow, temporary Chinese capital, said Japanese troops at Pengpu, northwest of Nanking, had been reinforced and, after months of relative inactivity, had again crossed the Hwai River with the apparent intention of trying to drive northward to Suchow and cut the Lunghai line.

The Chinese command believed renewal of activity there was merely a diversion to pull Chinese troops away from the Shantung front.

In Hankow, the Chinese, who have claimed capture of 700 Japanese prisoners late in March, have thus far displayed only one. Latest Chinese reports asserted the prisoners had been taken to Shensi Province, where they will be given intensified political "education" designed to convince them the policy of their military leaders is wrong and doomed to failure.

Guns Heard in Peiping.

Peiping, April 26 (AP).—Heavy gunfire was audible west of Peiping today in what foreign observers believed to be a Japanese attempt to dislodge guerrilla bands from the hills, where they have been attacking Japanese outposts in the last week.

Japanese officially described the shooting as "artillery practice."

Chinese newspapermen returning to the city from the hills, however, reported fighting started four days ago when guerrillas staged a night attack on Mentoukou, 20 miles west of Peiping, dynamiting Japanese coal mines and burning buildings.

Part of the Japanese garrison was said to have escaped by swimming the Yungting River. The Japanese retaliated by a two-day bombardment, according to foreign observers, who said today's firing was to punish villages in that area for harboring the guerrillas.

Mexico Again Refuses Britain's Oil Demands

Mexico City, April 26 (AP).—The Mexican government told Great Britain for the second time today that expropriated properties of Aguila (Royal Dutch Shell) Oil Co. would not be returned. The refusal was in a formal reply to a British note last week insisting the properties be returned.

Jews' Liquidation In Austria by 1942 Hitler Paper's Aim

Vienna, April 26 (AP).—A four-year plan to "extinguish" the Jews from Austrian life was advocated today by the Vienna edition of the Volkischer Beobachter, Adolf Hitler's organ.

"No store, no factory shall be under Jewish management, and by 1942 no Jew shall have opportunity to earn money in Austria except in purely Jewish communities where Jews may eat up their money and wait until they die," the paper said.

The paper suggested Jews could emigrate to "any country willing to receive them . . . Madagascar or the Gran Chaco or other places."

Besieged Rajah Mounts Cannon On Sikar Gates

Refuses to Quit Domain in Dispute With His Overlord.

By the Associated Press.

Jaipur, India, April 26.—The embattled Rajah of Sikar, in revolt against his overlord, the Maharajah of Jaipur, today mounted small cannon on his town gates and continued his defiance of a small besieging army.

All efforts to persuade the rajah to evacuate his stronghold at Sikar, walled town or northwestern India, were rejected.

The besiegers, including two trainloads of Jaipur state infantry, a squadron of lancers and 200 military police, have made no effort to take the town by storm. However, they mounted machine guns at points facing the walls.

Two hundred of the rajah's followers, armed with lathis—long staves—were seen at approaches to the main gate, and thousands of other followers were believed entrenched inside the town, normal population of which is about 18,000.

Origin Undetermined.

Shouts of "Long live the rajah!" were heard inside Sikar.

The origin of the quarrel between the rajah and the 26-year-old polo-playing Maharajah, which broke into open defiance and troop movements yesterday, remained obscure. One report said it was over a proposed political marriage for the rajah's 16-year-old son and heir.

The besieging forces were commanded by Lieut. Col. Sir Henry Beauchamp St. John, a retired British officer of the Indian political department, now in the service of the Maharajah as premier of Jaipur.

Sikar is about 75 miles northwest of the City of Jaipur, capital of the Maharajah domain.

Ten Slain by Police.

Bombay, India, Aril 26 (AP).—Ten persons were killed when police of the State of Mysore fired on a crowd which insisted upon hoisting the Indian congress flag at a meeting at Biduraswathan, near Kolar, it was announced today. Many persons were wounded.

the American people that the calmness with which Czechoslovakia accepted the Hitler coup in Austria signified that "we are fully prepared to meet realities which are forced upon us with realities of which we are in command."

"By virtue of the collective will of our people we are today stronger than we ever were before," he said. "In the spirit of our past—in the spirit of the moral and intellectual qualities of our people—we are exerting all our forces to build up our restored state as a real home for all its ethnical elements."

London, April 26 (AP).—British and French ministers today studied fresh reports on Czechoslovakia's German minority problem in preparation for joint talks on how to keep peace in Europe or insure victory in the event of war.

French Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet will fly to London tomorrow. They will open conferences with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax Thursday—just six months to a day after their predecessors came here on a similar mission.

The fate of the central European democracy was one of the most urgent questions before the ministers. Joined with it was the whole issue of German expansion.

France's defensive alliance with Czechoslovakia made this a subject of vital concern to her especially, but Daladier was cold toward a possible four-power pact linking Germany with Britain, France and Italy to keep peace.

The ministers apparently pinned their hopes of solving peacefully the Czechoslovak problem on the conciliation of the government and the Sudeten Germans with the possible aid of Premier Mussolini's influence on Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Bonnet was said to have held a long conference in Paris today with Jules Blondel, French charge d'affaires in Rome, on French-Italian negotiations for an accord paralleling the new Anglo-Italian agreement.

Rome, April 26 (AP).—French-Italian conversations on the projected friendship agreement probably will be held up until after Reichsfuehrer Hitler's Rome visit from May 3 to May 10, informed quarters said tonight.

Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, it was stated, will remain in Albania as a guest at King Zog's wedding until Friday.

Paris, April 26 (AP).—Czechoslovakia, depending on France to plead her cause with Great Britain, tonight gave Premier Daladier a memorandum rejecting Nazi minority demands as threats against Czech independence, on the eve of the departure of Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet for talks in London.

Czech sources said the memorandum was the Praha government's answer to Czech Nazi Leader Henlein's minimum demands for his Sudeten German party.

Pole Plane's Fate Seen in 'Splash' in Water Off Alaska

By the Associated Press.

An Army radio operator at Point Barrow, Alaska, reported to the War Department yesterday that natives at an isolated Alaskan village asserted they saw the splash of a "large object" last August which suggested might have been the missing plane of the Russian aviator Sigismund Levanevsky.

Levanevsky with five companions left Moscow last August 12 for the United States.

After passing over the North Pole, the flier radioed one of his engines was dead because of a damaged oil pipe. After that his radio was silent.

Only Man Who Knew Victoria's Wealth Dies

London, April 26 (AP).—A. T. Barber, 80, the only man who knew the value of contents of Windsor Castle—the royal residence—died today.

Queen Victoria commissioned him to value contents of the castle, which included gold plate, works of art, antiques and china, and pledged him to secrecy.

Missionary Reported Killed by Guerrillas

Shanghai, April 26 (AP).—A message received at Jesuit headquarters today said that Father Josephus Sontag, 39-year-old French missionary, had been shot and killed by Chinese guerrillas at Sienhsien, in Hopeh Province, 110 miles south of Peiping.

Frank B. Noyes And The A. P.

Si monumentum requiris circumspice—"If you would see his monument, look around."

The historic phrase was inscribed by the son of Sir Christopher Wren on the tomb of that famous architect in St. Paul's Cathedral, London. But the exhortation is equally applicable as tribute to a Washingtonian, who is still, happily, in the full vigor of his very active life, and whose notable achievement as president of the Associated Press for 38 consecutive annual terms was this week celebrated in New York. If one would see the lasting monument to Frank B. Noyes one need only look at the pages of this or any of 1,304 other newspapers which owe so much of their present substance to the A. P.

Mr. Noyes is the last survivor of a gallant triumvirate—Victor Lawson and Melville Stone were the others—who conceived the idea of a cooperative, nonprofit-making and strictly non-partisan news service. To it each member newspaper should contribute and from it all members would receive. The idea, simple in essentials but with many impediments before reaching its present stage of accomplishment, has revolutionized the American newspaper. And no man has done more to direct the growth of the idea than Mr. Noyes, who has now resigned as president of the A. P. but still continues to give his services as director.

It is said that the Associated Press has done much to further that standardization of newspapers which many who like more journalistic variety and personality condemn. And the agency is unquestionably responsible for a degree of standardization. It does so by supplying the same reliable news, factually reported, as free from bias as is humanly possible, to all who are its members and thereby to the great majority of American newspaper readers. The only criticism to be made of such standardization is that it is not yet sufficiently universal.

On a basis of uncolored and unprejudiced reporting, and only on that basis, can a great newspaper be built. The Associated Press has laid the foundations on which individual publishers and editors may proceed to shape as characterful and stimulating a product as their talents and resources permit. But without that foundation the press of the United States as a whole would be far more deficient in elemental virtues than is the case. What the hallmark means on silver the letters AP have come to signify on news.

There is much to be done to improve the American newspaper. There is much that will be improved as the essential function of the press in a democracy is better understood, and as public interest demands the more finished product which many of the Fourth Estate would like to give. But however satisfactory the eventual structure, to the idea and the evolution of the Associated Press will go much of the credit. And with the story of the A. P. is inextricably mingled the contribution to its success of Frank B. Noyes.

Now United By Friendship.

The British-Eire agreement signed at London on Monday may prove to be the final settlement of a struggle that has been going on over a period of many centuries. Now peace is to take the place of strife between the two peoples, amity that of enmity. In a very real sense the sword is now to be transformed into a ploughshare.

So far as Great Britain is concerned, Monday's pact constitutes abandonment of the last vestiges of authority she once exercised over the 26 counties of Eire. This authority has been exceedingly limited and tenuous since the signature of the Anglo-Irish treaty of 1921, which created the Free State. But during the intervening years the remaining legal ties continuing to bind Ireland to Great Britain have one by one been severed. Last year when the State of Eire was proclaimed by Premier de Valera only one last link remained—Great Britain's right to maintain naval bases at Cobh, Bere Haven and Lough Swilly.

This right Great Britain has now voluntarily abandoned, and by this action the last faint shadow of British authority in Ireland has been removed. Eire's independence and sovereignty as proclaimed at Dublin are unquestioned in London.

But this very circumstance has brought to the Irish people a realization that the achievement of political independence cannot alter the facts of geography and of economics which bind them to the British. On Ireland's part, therefore, Monday's treaty also constitutes a declaration of interdependence. Recognition of the rightfulness of Britain's stand on land annuities is seen in Dublin's lump sum payment of £10,000,000 to the London government in compensation for the suspension of land payments. It was the interruption by the Irish Free State of these annuity payments six years ago which led to the disastrous tariff war between the two countries.

Now economic peace is to reign on both sides of the Irish Channel and de Valera's dream of autarchy is sharply curtailed. The valuable British market is again to be open to Irish beef and bacon while Great Britain is to regain its old Irish market for coal and manufactures.

Credit for this settlement belongs to both governments. It is a real feather in the cap of Eamon de Valera, of Premier Chamberlain and of Malcolm MacDonald, the young British minister for the Dominions. But back of these statesmen were the peoples of Great Britain and Ireland. They wanted to let bygones be bygones, to forget ancient grudges, to live at peace. They are to have their way. More completely separated than at any time in 700 years, Great Britain and Ireland are today united in friendship. It is the strongest kind of bond.

Washington's Relief Survey.

The future of public relief in the District should be vitally affected by the investigation which is about to begin under direction of Burdette G. Lewis. His study will be much more than a count of the unemployed in need of public assistance. It ought to be regarded as the first step toward giving Washington a really scientific relief system.

Some groups in Congress have been frankly critical of the relief policies followed by the Board of Public Welfare. They have asserted that relief grants have sometimes been too generous and that administrative expenses have been excessive. When the Lewis report is made Congress should be fully satisfied on this point. For the investigators are instructed to determine whether individual grants are too high or too low, to examine the character of the cases receiving assistance, and to analyze policies and procedures of public relief agencies with particular reference to the adequacy and competence of their personnel.

Obviously, then, Mr. Lewis will be called upon either to give the Public Assistance Division a clean bill of health or to recommend improvements in the present set-up. In either event the report should be a net gain for the community. Congress will be under obligation to correct abuses, if there are any, and to give the board sufficient funds to supply the relief needs of the District effectively.

Numerous local agencies are convinced that the only major defect in the District relief system is the meager appropriation voted by Congress. They, too, will have opportunity to match their beliefs against impartially-assembled facts. For Mr. Lewis must also investigate the extent of unemployment in the District, the need for all types of relief and the extent to which existing agencies are meeting the situation.

In making this study Mr. Lewis will have the aid of the Social Security Board, the Works Progress Administration, the Board of Public Welfare, the District Employment Center and various other agencies. Presumably he will attempt to integrate the relief problem with the numerous efforts now being made to improve the social security of local residents. That, of course, will be an essential first step if his study is to serve a useful purpose when its mere enumerations will be out of date.

Why Congress called for submission of the report on August 1 is a mystery, unless it was intended to prevent any action on District relief until after the elections. Three months may be sufficient time to collect the extensive data necessary, to analyze it and formulate recommendations. But since the report will not be available at this session of Congress it will be necessary to relate its findings to some source of continuing statistical information such as local unemployment among those eligible to compensation.

The blunder in timing may thus be minimized by the character of the study to be made. It is now especially important to focus attention upon long-time objectives. What is needed is a continuing source of information that will permit the District and Congress to estimate the adequacy of local relief. If Mr. Lewis can recommend such a formula his survey will be doubly valuable. Fortunately his training and experience seem admirably to fit him for that service.

Art And The Postoffice.

Washington's new museum of contemporary art lacks only one set of wood relief panels to be complete. Perhaps it should be called the Nation's museum, for reference is made to the Postoffice Department Building. In its lobbies and reception rooms are to be found murals and sculpture executed by 28 outstanding American artists, chosen in a manner which may be commended to memorial commissions in general and to that concerned with Thomas Jefferson in particular.

The Treasury Department, through its Section of Painting and Sculpture, selected two sculptors—Paul Manship and William Zorach — and three painters — Rockwell Kent, Reginald Marsh and Eugene Savage—on the basis of votes cast by a Nation-wide advisory committee of 21 experts. The other 23 contributing artists were chosen on the basis of designs or models submitted in anonymous competition. It is generally agreed that this democratic procedure not only minimizes stereotyped decoration but also stimulates artistic endeavor generally.

Various other Government buildings also contain, or soon will, art work similarly selected. Notable among these are the new buildings of the Justice and Interior departments and that of the Federal Trade Commission. But none of these can boast as large a variety of artistic contribution as Mr. Farley's governmental headquarters. In addition, murals have been installed under Mr. Edward Bruce's direction in more than 200 postoffices and courthouses throughout the country while 350 more are in process of acquiring them.

Future archeologists may well exhume postoffices rather than temples to discover the art of twentieth century America.

The Democratic Way.

Article 1 of the Bill of Rights says that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

These rights are guaranteed to rich and poor, to wise and foolish, to public-spirited citizens and selfish pressure groups. That is because their untrammeled exercise is essential to preservation of the democratic form of government.

Yet Representative Rayburn lashes out against petitions directed against the President's pump-priming program as if their signers were public enemies. Solemnly he warns his colleagues against a threatened "great flood of propaganda" instigated by a large corporation that is alleged to have started chain telegrams against the reorganization program. Supposing this report to be true, that is no reason for ignoring the petition or failing to judge it objectively. There is actually far less reason for warning Congress against this sort of private propaganda than against petitions in favor of the spending program signed by WPA beneficiaries.

The average Congressman is too astute to be misled by chain telegrams, stereotyped petitions and similar devices. He has enough experience and common sense to make allowance for the exaggerated claims of pressure groups. And he is certainly more capable of separating the wheat from the chaff than are official spokesmen for the Administration anxious only to discredit effective criticism of its policies.

All citizens who unite to support or oppose any legislative program by addressing petitions to Congress are really propagandists. Their motives and their aims may be good or bad from a national standpoint. Their methods may be effective or bungling. Certainly a good deal of the "high pressure" propaganda of the recent past did more harm than good to the causes espoused. To bombard legislators with obviously "inspired" protests arouses a natural resentment, and tends to prejudice the victims of such mass assaults. But regardless of the methods employed, law-abiding citizens are wholly entitled to petition their representatives.

This freedom offers the best possible assurance that the state of public opinion will be correctly interpreted by those in power. Naturally mistakes will be made at times, but they are not irrevocable when the right to protest exists. There would be no way of knowing what a majority of the people think, if all the propaganda and petitions unfavorable to Administration policies were cast aside as for that reason unworthy of attention. That is not the democratic way of government. It is more akin to the methods employed by dictators.

In Behalf Of Fair Play.

The Supreme Court has invalidated an order issued by Secretary Wallace in 1933 reducing fees charged by marketing agencies at the Kansas City Stock Yards. The question of the reasonableness of the charges was not involved. The point at issue was whether the plaintiffs had been accorded adequate hearings before announcement of the order. In holding to the contrary, the Court took occasion to state what it understands a "full hearing" to be.

It implies not only "the right to present evidence, but also a reasonable opportunity to know the claims of the opposing party and to meet them . . . Those who are brought into contest with the Government in a quasi-judicial proceeding aimed at the control of their activities," the Court said, "are entitled to be fairly advised of what the Government proposes and to be heard upon its proposals before it issues its final command."

Since the evidence showed that such opportunities were denied the plaintiffs in this case, Chief Justice Hughes called the hearing "fatally defective." The decision is not only a rebuke to Department of Agriculture officials. It is also in the nature of a general warning to other regulatory agencies not to overstep the limits of their authority. Indeed, the Court goes out of its way to emphasize the importance of the great expansion that has occurred in the field of administrative regulation.

Such a development, it explains, has come in response to social needs and is made possible "by adherence to the basic principles that the legislature shall appropriately determine the standards of administrative action." That is a strong reminder to Congress of the danger in legislation which, like the national industrial recovery act, confers excessive discretionary power upon executive agencies. In exercising quasi-judicial functions, furthermore, the Court points out that administrative agencies must protect the liberty and property of the citizen by observing the "rudimentary requirements of fair play."

Not the least significant point brought out by this illuminating decision is the stress laid upon fair treatment of regulated concerns as a means of maintaining public confidence in the value and soundness of administrative regulation.

Proposes "American Party."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Old party names are almost meaningless. The New Deal group has captured the Democratic organizations in most States, while the Republican outfit is in the "dumps," and its name is anathema in the South and not too well regarded in its old industrial strongholds.

Here is an opportunity unequaled in our times for the liberal elements of the two old parties to unite under a new name—I suggest "American Party"—and sweep the un-American New Deal collectivists from power.

It would stand for the revival of the principles that gave our country greatness in every field.

It would oppose the Marxian economic quackery that is poisoning our national life and bankrupting our country.

It would fight for old-time liberty in opposition to the bureaucratic tyranny and political slavery now creeping over our people.

It would defend the Constitution and the independence and separation of three divisions of Government.

It would reduce the excessive payroll taxes mislabeled "social security," which hamper recovery.

It would stand for a constitutional amendment outlawing the "closed shop," which is an injustice to more than 100,000,000 nonunion Americans—the great middle class, which the Reds hate, but without whom no prosperity would ever be possible.

By adopting the name "American," the "grand new party" could go into every precinct in the South and heal the breach that has kept that section under a one-party dictatorship.

Let us Republicans make it easier for our "Democratic" friends who think as we do to join us. Now is the time. In 1940 we can sweep the country.

HUDSON DE PRIEST.
New York City, April 22.

A Veteran's Advice To Doctors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The medical profession seems to be in a dither these days, frightened by what seems to be a very real threat of Government competition through subsidized socialized medicine. Physicians visualize loss of income and prestige.

But I've not heard a word from the doctors about the fate of their patients under the benign ministrations of socialized medicine. They are thinking, it would seem, about their own fate. That is natural, since the pocketbook nerve is the most sensitive of all. But it is mighty poor strategy. The public doesn't give a hoot for the doctors' pocketbooks; but it cares considerably about its own pocketbook.

Some years ago, at the beginning of the New Deal, when the Administration launched its program to socialize the utility industry, the leaders of that business began screaming bloody murder about "unfair competition." They were entirely logical. But their wails fell upon deaf ears. The public just couldn't muster up any pity for the poor downtrodden "power trust."

The utility industry learned to its sorrow that it couldn't appeal to the public's sense of fair play when the public's pocketbook was involved. And they seem to have changed their tactics. They now are talking about the enormous amounts being taken from the public pocketbook to pay for a puny return in lower rates to a favored few including the aluminum trust. That's talking turkey: language anybody can understand. Its effectiveness can be measured by the screams going up lately from the Administration and by the continuous show of propitiating gestures from the White House.

It seems to me that the doctors could well take a leaf from the book of the utilities. Stop talking about what socialized medicine will do to them and start talking about what socialized medicine will do to the patient. And they should take their heads out of the sand and take a look at themselves. The fact is that there must be some justification or there would not be so broad a support of the so-called group health idea.

There happen to be several hundreds of thousand former victims of a sort of socialized medicine, most of whom are living witnesses to the evils of it. I refer to the thousands of sick and wounded treated in the Army hospitals during and after the World War, of whom I am one.

I cannot say that my doctors were indifferent to me. On the contrary, they were very attentive. I was a nice fat human guinea pig, helpless to resist their vivisection. All in the interest of science and giving some young surgeons a bit of practice, I was shunted about through a dozen hospitals and operated on—wholly unnecessarily I now know—three times. For a headcold my nose was cut three times for sinus. Now I have got sinusitis and I'll have it the rest of my life.

It isn't fair to indict the Army Medical Corps on the basis of one instance. In fact I feel a bit ungrateful myself in citing this example when I think of the brilliant chapter in American military history which was written by the Hospital Corps on the fields of a dozen battles in France. The doctors and their assistants were, without doubt, the most courageous soldiers we had; but that wasn't socialized medicine.

Nevertheless, there were countless experimental operations in the hospitals of France which no doctor in private practice would have dared perform on his own patient.

The danger of socialized medicine lies in disestablishing the personal responsibility and personal relations of the doctor to his patient. Put a doctor on a pay roll and he'll either become lazy and indifferent, or he'll view his patients with the cold curiosity of the scientific experimenter.

Personally, I don't want to submit the health of myself or of my children or of my wife to a doctor who'd just as soon open you up to see what makes you tick as to look at you; nor to a doctor who'd paint my stomach with iodine and give me a pair of CC pills for appendicitis—as happened occasionally in the Army.

The simple fact is that being sick costs much too much. And the ancient practice of charging the rich too much so that the poor can be treated at little or no cost in many cases has been abused to the point where doctors are charging all the traffic will bear. If they don't want a public medicine commission regulating their rates as the utilities have public utilities commissions, their association should set up a committee with disciplinary powers to whom appeals of overcharged patients can be taken.

Another too costly item is the medical examination. Absolutely necessary to proper diagnosis, the X-ray and other test fees run anywhere from $35 to $100, depending on the nature of the examination. Now most of this examination business is simply a scientific mechanical operation. Mass production would cheapen the process immensely. Socialized medicine could lick the dozen or so small laboratories in Washington to a fare-thee-well. The doctors themselves should pool their resources and establish a single large not-for-profit laboratory equipped to take all the necessary tests. And the cost of medical examinations would be cut two-thirds.

These steps should be taken for the selfish reason that if they aren't business is going to be tough for the ethical doctors a few years from now.

A SINCERE FRIEND OF ETHICAL MEDICINE.
Washington, April 23.

Highway Planning.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In connection with the proposed spending program to effect recovery, highway construction should take the lead. All moneys should be spent on necessary projects and boondoggling should be eliminated entirely. This requires careful planning. Many suggestions have been made for a new North-South coastal highway between Boston and Richmond, a new highway to the beaches from Washington, a cut-off around Washington for through commercial traffic, and the latest, tubes and bridges to replace the highway and railroad bridges south of the city to Virginia.

First we must have a master plan for the Washington, Baltimore, Annapolis area that conforms to an approved national highway plan. This plan should be made with the assistance of the highway commissions of the several States affected and the United States Bureau of Public Roads, and when finally approved should be the approved plan of highway extension for the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis area. This master plan should be made under the supervision of a commission composed of engineers of national reputation and should be selected by the engineering council. This would give us guidance of eminent engineers similar to the architectural guidance provided by the Fine Arts Commission.

The quicker we start such a regional planning board the sooner will our dreams of an approved highway system for the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis area come true.

Lawyer's Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Horace Russell, general counsel of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, franked some 10,000 letters boosting the private law business of an associate, he violated the fundamental ethics of the Federal Bar Association, of which he is president, and of the American Bar Association, which lists him as a member of several important committees.

These associations are presumed to see to it that not only their own members, but all lawyers as well, extend fair treatment to the public and to each other. What chance does the average lawyer in Washington have to commence practicing if the bar associations countenance free Government advertising for favored former Government lawyers? What chance have the established lawyers in Washington to retain their clientele if Government departments before whom they practice brazenly advise those who may have prospective business before them to send business to recently resigned employes, urging that they are going to the "right place" to receive help?

A Snake Hunt?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As to the suggestion that Congress pass a $1 bounty for each poisonous snake killed, I cannot understand the writer's motive and I cannot conceive of any possible good. In the first place, the poisonous snake scare is widespread because very few people know which reptiles are poisonous. All snakes are useful and uncontrolled killing of even poisonous ones would rob our fauna of an interesting and useful element.

The mountain people mentioned are generally nondiscriminating when they kill snakes. Most of the snakes have already become so rare that even one who searches for them in a scientific way has great difficulty locating them. In the second place, the person who expects to meet up with poisonous snakes should be prepared with an anti-venom set, which fits in the pocket and costs little.

Already many species of animals have vanished through illiterate and careless murder. Why should the defenseless, helpful snakes disappear too?

The Post Impressionist

The Sixth Mayor.

WHAT would Thomas Carbery, sixth Mayor of Washington, say if he could see us going to the polls on Saturday for the District suffrage referendum? It was just 116 years ago since he asked of Congress that "the inhabitants of the District of Columbia be relieved from the disenfranchisement and other grievances under which they now labor."

Would he look askance, I wonder, puzzled at the slow moving "modern times?"

Whatever the august Mayor's reactions might be, were he to return today, we can at least get a quick post impression of that first great "city dinner" when Mayor Carbery launched his drive for votes for Washington.

It no doubt seemed the psychological time to press the issue, or, only two years before, the people of the city had gained the right to elect their own Mayor by popular vote. Apparently they hoped to get more privileges while the getting was good. For twenty years the Mayors of Washington had been appointed by the President or elected by a council, but now the people had experienced the thrill of casting a ballot and they clamored for more.

Dissatisfied with lesser rights than were enjoyed by their neighbors in Maryland and Virginia, they prevailed upon the Mayor to take up the cause of District representation. Mayor Carbery was a young and popular bachelor and he did what most young bachelors do—he gave a dinner. It was to be the first of the famous "city dinners" of the days when Washington boasted a Mayor.

Independence Day seemed the logical time to launch the important civic program and invitations were sent, not only to leaders in the affairs of the District but to influential members of Congress, heads of Government departments and even to representatives of foreign nations. It was to be a gala occasion, the "city dinner" of July 4, 1822.

From the speaker's table in the dining room of Strother's Hotel, Mayor Carbery, as chairman of the Fourth of July committee, greeted the assembled guests. Beside him sat Gen. J. P. Van Ness, vice chairman of the day.

Courteous and courtly, Washington's distinguished sixth Mayor raised his glass and gave the key toast of the celebration: "The plan of our Federal Government—may it be handed down to the latest posterity, in the purity of republican simplicity."

There were 34 toasts in all; some to the Federal Government, others to the District. Prize poems were read and then the Mayor rose to his feet and began the address which he hoped would be the opening wedge for complete District suffrage.

After a brief statement of the peculiar and humiliating situation in which the inhabitants of the District were placed, he began his ardent championship of the principle that taxation and representation are inseparable. From the applause it seemed that the battle had been won almost before it started.

The Mayor went home that night encouraged and enthusiastic for this change in local government, which he felt would establish the Capital City on a firmer foundation. To keep the ball rolling he instituted "town meetings," the forerunners of our present-day citizens' associations.

But as time went on, other problems presented themselves; problems of an even more imperative nature. Epidemics of malaria were becoming more frequent and drainage of the swamp area of lower Washington was a project which could not be ignored. There was the movement for a national monument to George Washington and a public park system to be developed. Somewhere along the way city leaders lost sight of the ballot for the District.

The long illness of Thomas Carbery's sister took much of his time and energy. His marriage to Mary Manning of Virginia ended tragically with her death and the death of their four children within the brief space of nine years.

Eventually Thomas Carbery retired to his country home, the rolling wooded estate upon which Walter Reed General Hospital has been built. He died in 1863 with the District ballot still unclaimed.

It was in 1871 that Congress repealed the charters of Washington and Georgetown and established a new government of the entire city, this time with a governor at the head. But this proved so unsatisfactory that three years later the government by commissioners was substituted. After a trial period of four years this form of government was made permanent.

And now the old issue of a District ballot has been taken out of its moth balls and brushed up for revival. Whether it will stand being revived so many times is a question. But be that as it may, I would be the last one to say that Thomas Carbery was wrong when he sponsored the idea of "relieving the inhabitants of the District from disenfranchisement," although if he were to return today I wouldn't be surprised if he would just shake his head and remark that "after all, times have changed since James Monroe."

Hitler's Speech

By
A Washington Student

Pages From A Letter Home.

Munich, April 3.

Dear ——:

I will begin by telling you about Hitler's speech, which happened yesterday and is freshest in my mind.

The weather was perfect. The sky was of the bluest blue and little specks of silver and black airplanes were busily combing the clouds above while S. S. and S. R. men were leading them a close race in the narrow streets shooting about in their small cars.

The last tram let us down about three-fourths of a mile from the hall and formation ground and we didn't need to ask any directions at first, but only followed the black streams of people. But then it got more and more confusing as the streets broadened out and became more numerous and there were thick streams of people on all of them. After asking futile questions we simply picked a road and went along it and at the end we came out on the edge of the formation ground, which lay as a sort of pit beneath us.

It was so huge it took our breath away. At the back of it on the buildings in mammoth gold letters were the words "Ein Reich, ein Volk, ein Fuehrer." Across, leading out of the pit to the halls, was a huge staircase draped in red and with giant pillars and huge gold bowls that flared with fire. Hitler was to walk up this. Then above were the halls, one after the other, huge things with courtyards and so swarming with S. S., S. R. and Arbseit Diensts that it was impossible to see anything. People were so jammed that it was impossible to move almost.

* * * *

FINALLY we came to an imposing line of S. R. men and they looked at our tickets and passed us through a gate. We went through three courtyards to our hall. The whole thing was beautifully arranged and there was absolutely no scrambling about. In each of the two halls were 10,000 people. In the formation ground outside were 500,000! A band was playing through the microphones (which were perfect—not screechy like most of ours). The drums were beating, beating, beating, so you had to yell above them.

After waiting a little over an hour every seat was taken. Endless rows of S. R. men came in carrying the gold symbol of their order and all the others with flags—on and on they came, enough to go down and fill the huge stand behind the speaking box and for the overflow to continue on around the hall, very close together. The whole time the Germans had to keep their arms up and out. At the end came the special flag of the party that was a part of the first "putsch," I think. Then there was more ceremony and singing and finally tremendous cheering and Wagner came in. He made a short speech which sounded very sentimental to me and which M—— said was even more so if you understood it. Then in solemn, reverent tones he concluded with "Der Fuehrer spricht." Some more cheering went up. Then cannon began to boom!

They boomed quite deafeningly for 15 minutes and on the loud speakers came tremendous cheering. M—— said this was because Hitler had reached the steps in the formation ground and was walking up them and making his way through his worshippers to our hall.

Then finally HE—as he had grown in everybody's imagination by this time—came in and I leave it to you to guess what the noise was like and what the faces looked like. I've never seen faces crazy with joy before and found them quite fascinating, but rather embarrassing to look at. Then songs began and more wild cheering and he started to speak.

* * * *

HIS VOICE was terrible—it hurt to hear him. He's been speaking all over the country and has been at it for some time so it's a wonder he has any left at all. His hands made short little fluttering gestures when he emphasized his points, which was practically all the time. Somehow it didn't seem to go with the man.

He wouldn't mention Schuschnigg by name, but called him "that man." He said the Austrians had never elected Schuschnigg and had consequently never wanted him, as was proved by their demonstration. He talked in scornful tones of how other countries had called him a criminal in 1933 and how he had proved to them and to his people what malice that was. M—— was wonderful at translating, and did so every time there was cheering—which was about every three minutes. Then his voice rose with a wonderful ring and appeal as he told the people that none of this could be done without them. This made them go quite mad again and they drummed on the floor with their feet. At last it was ended and again the noise was indescribable and then little by little we all squashed out, all slightly dazed and tired out.

When we got to the main platz where the S. S. men always keep guard, and where one is supposed to salute at, we arrived at the same time as a battalion of small boys of about 10 years. There must have been several hundreds, all softly shuffling down the street. At a sharp command from their leader at a certain place in the road, they all broke into the goose step and "dressed left" as they passed the guard. It was quite a sight.

We had to walk all the way home. The next morning I was so worn out from everything I could hardly get up.

Czechoslovakia

Nation Torn By Internal Dissension As Jaws Of Germany Close Relentlessly Around It; Democratic Ideals Held Dear.

By Peter F. Drucker.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Prague, April 13.

ON MY WAY from the Hungarian frontier to Prague I ran into a veritable army of "Sudetendeutsche"—the German-speaking minority in Czechoslovakia—returning from Vienna whence they had been conveyed in specially chartered coaches in order to witness Hitler's triumphal entry into the old Austro-Hungarian capital. Openly displaying their Nazi uniforms and their swastika armlets—both actually forbidden in Czechoslovakia—they shouted "Heil Hitler" incessantly for hours as they drove through the Czech countryside. But apart from that they seemed harmless enough.

Nevertheless the small Czech villages and towns along the main road through which we passed were deserted. The shutters had been closed and the shops were boarded up. It was not the returning "Sudetendeutsche" of whom the Czech peasants and shopkeepers were afraid. They were convinced that these noisy and exuberant Nazis would be followed by the silent and disciplined motorized columns of the regular German army. And, as always on such occasions, you could find enough people who claimed that they had actually seen German tanks or cannon from a church spire or a hill.

The fear of an immediate attack upon Czechoslovakia following Hitler's invasion of Austria was by no means as unreasonable as it perhaps sounds 3,000 miles away.

The strength of the army by which the occupation of Austria was effected and the fact that German soldiers continued to pour over the Austrian border, long after Austria had completely surrendered, seemed to point to another and greater immediate military objective. Nor was it sheer imagination that a surprisingly large part of the German army of occupation was concentrated around the three main roads from Austria into Czechoslovakia. Finally the German officers and soldiers stationed at or near the Austro-Czech frontier did not even try to conceal their expectation to be led back into Germany "via Prague."

Internal Disruption Reported Gaining Daily.

SINCE THEN the fear of an immediate military invasion of the country has somewhat subsided. But the disruption of Czechoslovakia from within has proceeded at an unprecedented and almost unimaginable pace. In the German-speaking districts along the eastern and northern borders the outlawed semimilitary Nazi organizations are actually ruling the countryside, if not the bigger towns. Czech and Jewish businessmen, lawyers, doctors and officials are boycotted. This goes so far that in isolated parts of the country the inhabitants are being forced to lay their disputes before party arbiters instead of before the official courts. And the "voluntary" contributions for the party organization and for the party charity are as much compulsory as they are in Germany itself.

There can be no doubt that the sway of the "Sudetendeutsche" Nazi party over the German minority in Czechoslovakia is based upon open or secret terror to a very substantial extent. But although only a small part of the German-speaking minority is in favor of the Nazi system and of Nazi methods, the large majority of this minority are prepared to regard Naziism as a minor evil as compared with the advantages of union with Germany and of escape from Czech rule. And the same applies to the smaller Hungarian minority in the southeast and the Poles in the northeast.

As far as "Carpatho-Ruthenia"—the long mountainous and almost inaccessible "tail" stretching due east almost to the Russian border—is concerned, conditions have been bad for some time. This part of the country is populated by a multitude of small national and tribal groups—many still living in a very primitive stage. It has little industry and almost no arable soil. In this backward country German propaganda money has done miracles.

Desertion of Slovaks Also Threatens Prague.

MOST SERIOUS, however, for the future of Czechoslovakia as an independent nation is the threatening desertion of the Slovaks.

The "autonomy movement" of the Slovaks is not really spontaneous. There have been difficulties between the Czechs and the Slovaks—usually squalid, petty quarrels which would have passed unnoticed anywhere but in the overheated atmosphere of central Europe. But the Slovaks are so closely akin to the Czechs—in fact they are nationally and racially of the same stock—that they should have the strongest interest in the survival of an independent Czechoslovakia within its present borders.

Moreover they are far too weak themselves to stand on their own feet and unless they are united with the Czechs in one state they seem bound to fall back under Hungarian or German rule. But it is just this precarious situation of the Slovaks which is skillfully exploited by Germany in order to lure them away from their allegiance to Czechoslovakia.

Incessantly it is hammered into them, by radio broadcasts from Vienna, Breslau and Budapest, that Czechoslovakia cannot survive and that they have to choose between a return under the domination of their former masters or an alliance with Germany against the Czechs, which would at least guarantee them cultural and national autonomy in the new German-dominated "Mittel Europa." And a large part of the Slovak people have undoubtedly been very much impressed by this argument.

The complete surrender of the Austrian church to the Nazis seems bound to strengthen this tendency, as the Slovaks are among the most strongly Catholic people in Europe and have always resented the anticlerical spirit in the Prague government. And if the Slovaks desert, the Czechs will be in a numerical minority in their own country and will moreover be unable to maintain any military resistance. With Slovakia hostile or even neutral, Russia would probably find it next to impossible to send any military help in the case of a German attack upon the Czechs.

How desperate the situation is judged to be by the Czechs themselves is shown by the pathetic but futile attempts of Czech businessmen and industrialists to make their property safe from the danger of confiscation and expropriation by the Germans. Everywhere in Europe: in Zurich, London, Paris and Amsterdam, you meet Czech businessmen who try to find some formula under which title to their plant would pass to a nominally foreign-owned company in order to have the protection of a neutral flag. They have no illusions about the efficacy of such a scheme. But they hope against hope that it will at least prevent their being thrown out overnight from their own businesses as their Austrian friends and competitors have been thrown out in recent weeks.

Courage Running High Among Beleaguered People.

WHATEVER mistakes the Czechs made in the past in ruling their heterogeneous country, their courage under the present desperate circumstances calls for nothing but admiration. They have little hope that more will be left to them than a precarious autonomy under German political, economic and military control. They know that Germany can achieve that without actual military attack by use of constant pressure. And although they continue to arm they realize that a strengthening of their bargaining position is all they can hope for.

Nevertheless the Czechs are less prepared than ever to give up their democratic form of government and to adopt a totalitarian regime. Germany's social and economic organization exercises a profound attraction, especially upon the Czech peasant. But there is no other country east of the Rhine in which democracy and the ideals for which democracy stands are still as consciously cherished and as highly valued as among the Czechs.

This is all the more remarkable as adoption of a totalitarian regime would probably do more to placate Germany than any other measure. But the Czechs are not—or at least not yet—prepared to make this sacrifice. They are determined rather to suffer the disruption of their country and the loss of their hard-won statehood than to yield their civil liberties. It is, so the Czech statesmen seem to believe, this faithful adherence to the political ideals of their liberator—President Masaryk—more than the fear of military resistance or of general war, that has restrained Hitler from striking at once at Czechoslovakia.

Co-operatives

By
Frank M. Kleiler

An Informative Book.

UNDER THE STIMULUS OF DEPRESSION the number of co-operative societies in the United States has grown to more than 12,000. An up-to-date and not too technical exposition of the nature and origin of these societies has long been needed. "Co-operation: An American Way," John Daniels, now fills the need.

Mr. Daniels has a broad concept of the meaning of co-operation. It includes not only collective purchasing and marketing but also co-operative credit, insurance, housing, medical service, education, recreation and various cultural activities. The author reports that approximately 6,000,000 persons hold membership in co-operative societies and that the movement directly affects many millions more. He envisions the whole network as the foundation for a new social and economic order which he calls a "mutation of capitalism." This co-operative system would come into being gradually by piecemeal substitution of production for the benefit primarily of consumers instead of production for the benefit primarily of the producers and distributors.

* * * *

AS ITS TITLE INDICATES, the book emphasizes the point that the co-operative movement in this country is distinctively American. "It derived its inspiration from the Declaration of Independence and the American Constitution." Mr. Daniels states, and "it sprang from native roots and has been created in the main by old Americans and enriched by contributions from new Americans." Tracing the history of co-operation in this country, he begins with the formation about 1820 of co-operative fire insurance groups among farmers and shows how this was followed by incorporating into the American movement the Rochdale plan of co-operative stores.

This approach to the subject distinguishes this book from the rest of the literature on the movement. Much has been written about the development of co-operatives abroad, especially in Sweden, but Mr. Daniels segregates the co-operatives in the United States and argues that the rudiments which inhere in the Rochdale principles have been expanded, modified and applied in characteristically American ways.

These observations are interesting, and perhaps they will go far in dispelling the notion that co-operation is a subversive alien importation and as such should be combatted lest it undermine American ideals. To describe the co-operative movement as "An American Way," however, is to minimize the importance of the facts that the co-operative movement in Scandinavian countries and other parts of the world is more mature than the movement in this country and that the nineteenth century immigrants are largely responsible for what gains co-operation has made in the United States.

IN ANY CASE, the co-operative movement does not necessarily gain in prestige by getting the label, "An American Way." This phrase has been the refuge of open-shoppers, industrial despots and anti-unionists of all descriptions. While it is good to have a strictly American history of the co-operative movement, there should be no reluctance to admit that it is only a part of a world-wide movement, that it is not distinctively American and that foreigners can teach Americans plenty about how to apply co-operative principles effectively.

While urban co-operatives have kept pace with rural co-operatives in foreign countries, the development of urban co-operatives appears to be lagging in the United States. This lag is due to a number of factors, and Mr. Daniels reports that the Government's discriminatory policy is important among them. "So far as the Federal Government is concerned," he states, "it is to be highly commended for all it has done to provide farmers' co-operatives with loans—but in failing thus far to provide similar loan facilities for urban co-operatives it is certainly lagging behind considerations of equity and the welfare of urban consumers." To compensate for their inability to borrow from Federal agencies, the author suggests that the urban co-operatives will have to provide themselves with funds through resources accruing from co-operative insurance.

Mr. Daniels does not discuss fully the policy of the Government toward the co-operative movement, but his figures indicate that co-operation is steadily on the increase and is likely to continue in the present direction regardless of encouragement or discouragement by the Government. In farmers' co-operative purchasing, for example, the volume increased from a little less than $6,000,000 in 1913 to $400,000,000 in 1937.

Such impressive facts as these indicate that the co-operatives have made sweeping advances in recent years and are an important and fertile field for study. No American can afford to be uninformed on their activities.

The Lumberjack

By Stephen English

THE TONE OF "HOLY OLD MACKINAW" is set by the logger's trilogy of fun; booze, bawd and battle. The jack's life was strenuous, to say the least, and his months of toil in the wilderness pointed inevitably to the infrequent but monstrous pleasures the towns of fringing civilization were equipped to provide. The delights of sin were adequate in Bangor, Me.; Muskegon, Mich., and its neighbors purveyed goods and services on a grander model. The "skidroads" of the Pacific Coast towns scaled their offerings to the mammoth timber, in liquor and fancy-houses if not in battle. The old-time logger liked his relaxation strong and raw, and what he liked he got.

Not so the modern logger. Compared to his predecessors he is a weakling. The comforts of modern life, marriage and children, the advent of logging machinery and smooth highways—these things have reduced the bull of the woods to the stature of an ordinary man. Even doomed by tractor logging is the picturesque high-rigger, such as he who demonstrated last year for the President his skill in mounting a 300-foot fir to saw off its top and then cling with spurs and single rope lest the swinging trunk fling him after the falling foliage to destruction below.

The rougher, tougher days were happier, Mr. Holbrook apparently believes. Jigger Jones was then a reality, not a tradition. It was he who "would walk a felled spruce, barefoot, and kick off every knot from butt to top." The Jigger lived into the CCC era, and met an unromantic fate in an automobile accident. He and his ilk would make light of the modern logger and his surroundings. Yet somewhere along the line the logger became socially conscious, and largely as a result of I. W. W. demands and of the World War came changes in the logger's life which are probably not so much the signs of degeneration as Mr. Holbrook would indicate, but more the indications of revolt from the monotony of the economic struggle Westward from coast to coast.

Mr. Holbrook has fortunately not confined his account to the story of the lumberjack himself. The migration of the industry from Maine to the Lake States and thence to Washington, California and Oregon, was preceded in each case by the investment of capital in these areas by the timber barons. Mr. Bingham, of Maine, who bought over 2,000,000 acres there for 12½ cents an acre, had his counterpart in such men as Isaac Stephenson in the Lake States pineries and Frederick Weyerhaeuser on the coast. Migration likewise was paralleled by the development of tools and machinery. From Maine's contribution of the peavey through the expanding use of various types of saws to the ultimate achievements of the machine age in Lidgerwood skidders and tractor behemoths, is a development effectively accompanying the rise and fall of a peculiar species of man.

It is fortunate that the story of the lumberjack has been told by one who knows much of his logger lore from first-hand experience. Mr. Holbrook is not only the scion of lumbering ancestors, but has himself worked camps as widely separated as Vermont and British Columbia. From the desconseat around the barrel stove he learned many of the tall tales he repeats with such gusto, minimizing, by the way, the extent to which the widely publicized Paul Bunyan entered into the bunkhouse stories. Paul was merely a giant among giants.

Tax Agreement Gives Business Partial Relief

Tax

the meager amount of revenues which the Federal Government would receive," said Betters, who based his statement on preliminary reports from a survey ordered by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, conference president.

The Congressional tax conference reached a harmonious conclusion when Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, Republican Senate conferees, agreed to support the report as "the lesser of two evils." Chairman Pat Harrison said the modified tax bill "is the most forward step in years toward helping employment by private initiative through a fiscal policy of the Federal Government."

Vandenberg and Capper called the conference agreement "a long step toward restoration of tax sanity," but criticized as "unfortunate and unprecedented" President Roosevelt's recent letter to conferees indorsing the House bill.

"For two years," said their joint statement, "there will be a small and indefensible remnant of the surplus profits tax idea to which we continue to decline to subscribe in any degree. But the remnant is small, and so well cushioned, and so sure of a final death sentence two years hence after the people have passed upon this issue at the polls, that we prefer to take the conference decision than to fail back on existing destructive law.

"Meanwhile, with a single relatively inconsequential exception, the capital gains tax is reduced to the flat basis which we long have urged. We prefer this improvement, although not wholly adequate, rather than return to the inequity of the existing law."

The minority statement predicted the bill will neither raise the anticipated revenue or "remotely" approach a balanced budget and said the bill "should have been written to give business a permanent assurance that it is no longer to be pursued by ever-changing punitive levies."

Held Business Aid.

Harrison, despite his failure to win complete repeal of the undivided profits tax, said he was "very much satisfied with the final agreement."

"Through its generous and fair treatment, especially with respect to capital gains and liquidation, it should result in the releasing of billions of frozen securities to be invested in private enterprise and development," said the Senate Finance chairman.

"The generous treatment accorded in liquidation of utility holding companies should give great impetus to increasing employment and stabilizing the industry.

"The tax bill gives real relief to business and should, under normal business conditions, increase receipts to the Government."

Meanwhile, Representative Daniel A. Reed, of New York, a Republican member of the House Ways and Means Committee, criticized conference acceptance of the undivided profits tax principle and stiffening of Senate capital gains rates. In a radio address, Reed said that "instead of yielding to a Nation-wide demand for the relief requested, the conferees in abject obedience to Executive pressure, the exact nature of which the public can only surmise, have permitted two objectionable features of the bill to remain."

"It should be obvious to all of us," said Reed, "that had it not been for the dictatorial attitude of President Roosevelt in demanding that the undistributed profits tax and the capital gains tax be retained in the present bill, the conferees would have promptly accepted the verdict of public opinion, and under a normal course of legislative procedure these two unsound principles of taxation would have been promptly removed."

May Come Up Friday.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said Senate consideration of the report will depend on how quickly tax draftsmen can prepare the final bill, and on early termination of Senate naval bill debate. He said it was "possible" the report might be called up Friday.

On insistence of House managers and Treasury officials, the conference dropped from the bill the amendment of Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, to tax future issues of Federal securities. This action was taken despite the President's request for legislation removing exemptions reciprocally from official salaries and future issues of both Federal and State securities. The Treasury traditionally has opposed making Federal securities taxable unless the same treatment is given State and local issues. The Senate yielded on the Borah proposal when House members argued the tax-exempt question should all be dealt with in a separate measure.

Senate and House leaders privately expressed doubt that the President's tax immunity recommendations can be enacted into law at this session.

The conference committee accepted the House increase in Federal liquor taxes from $2 to $2.25 a gallon but eliminated a 6 per cent excise tax on imported pork imposed by the House but opposed by the Administration.

To ease the forced liquidation blow imposed on utility holding companies by "death sentence" features of the public utility holding company act the conference agreed to partial exemption from capital gains taxes on property transactions of liquidating utilities.

Period Extended.

The finished report also gives all corporations three years in which to consumate complete liquidation instead of the two years provided under existing law. Harrison fought for this modification which he believes will free a mountain of credit frozen in personal holding companies now landlocked by taxes. The change would permit a shareholder to realize his profits from liquidation in four taxable periods, instead of three.

As a substitute for the so-called "third basket" penalties on closely held corporations, favored by the President but defeated in the House, the conference accepted the Senate's plan to tighten present laws against improper accumulation of corporate surpluses.

In its revised form, section 102 of the law will place the burden of proof on the taxpayer to show "by a clear preponderance of the evidence" the absence of any purpose to avoid surtaxes upon shareholders where earnings and profits have been "unreasonably" accumulated.

Conferees returned to the present law on Federal estate taxes after Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York and other State officials complained that the proposed House changes in State death tax credits would have a serious effect on State budgets. The annual exemption on gifts to any one individual was reduced from $5,000 to $4,000. The House unsuccessfully sought to cut gift exemptions to $3,000.

Harrison announced that the undivided profits tax principle enacted for two years will not apply to banks and insurance companies. These will be taxed at a flat rate of 16½ per cent. The Senate bill had provided a flat 18 per cent tax.

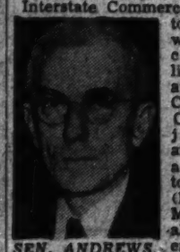
Andrews Blocked in Effort to Limit Motor Truck Jurisdiction of I. C. C.

Senator Andrews (Democrat), of Florida yesterday lost his effort to limit jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission to motor trucks which actually cross State lines. The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee rejected his amendment to a bill by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana to alter the present motor carrier act according to recommendations by the I. C. C.



SEN. ANDREWS.

The commission has held it has jurisdiction over carriers which haul goods destined for interstate commerce even though the trucks themselves do not cross State lines. The Wheeler bill was favorably reported but Andrews filed a minority report holding the I. C. C. interpretation would "destroy" many local carriers and transfer their business to lines which "happen" to have I. C. C. permits for interstate operations.

Representative Hancock (Democrat), of North Carolina, who is seeking the seat of Senator Reynolds in the coming Carolina primary, said yesterday he intends to "jar loose" the Senator "from whatever substantial support he might yet have in his beautiful home community." His statement was made in announcing he would campaign in Reynolds' home city of Asheville tomorrow.

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday approved a $226,962,867 appropriation for non-military activities of the War Department, after boosting the total by $30,353,142. The committee added $25,000,000 for preservation and maintenance of existing rivers and harbor works and $5,000,000 for new flood control work on the Mississippi system, including the Morganza floodway.

Total flood control work in the next fiscal year would cost $118,000,000, including $36,000,000 for the Mississippi and its tributaries. Of the remaining $82,000,000, the committee earmarked $4,000,000 for starting run-off, water-flow retardation and soil-erosion prevention projects by the Agriculture Department. Rivers and harbors funds voted by the House were raised from $70,020,000 to $95,020,000.

Another legalized-lottery effort yesterday brought introduction of a bill by Representative Phillips, (Democrat), of Connecticut. Phillips would divide the receipts between the State and Federal governments. Three commissioners would direct the lotteries, at an annual salary of $10,000 each. Counterfeiting of tickets would be severely punished under his bill.

16 Leaders Pledge President Help in Restoring Business

Spend

reported in other quarters that the President's ideas on guaranteed minimum annual wages for motor workers also may be aired.

Both bids for closer co-operation between business and Government officials dovetailed with Administration efforts to speed Congressional consideration of the President's spending-lending program and an attempt to shake the wage-hour bill loose from the House Rules committee.

At the Capitol, the House Appropriations Committee heard Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes outline PWA pump-priming plans under the new program and his proposal to start work on 2,174 projects now on PWA's approved list with $400,000,000 of the funds. Republican committeemen will cross-examin Ickes today.

Letter Stirs Attack.

A double-barrelled Republican backfire meanwhile greeted House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn's charge on Monday that big corporations were "plotting" a propaganda campaign to defeat the spending bill. Rayburn had read the House a letter from an unidentified writer warning that "a great flood of propaganda" is about to be loosed.

House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell declared this unsigned letter "bears some conspicuous earmarks of an inspired document" and asked a Congressional inquiry "to establish the authenticity and genuineness of that amazing document." Snell said "any official attempt to silence free expression of opposition is a flagrant repudiation of a fundamental principle of representative government."

Representative John Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, declared a "chain letter" program of propaganda in behalf of the spending program was inspired by Works Progress Administrator Harry Hopkins.

Other Governments.

Other developments on the spending-lending recovery front:

Bills to double the capital of the United States Housing Authority (from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000), were introduced in the Senate by Chairman Robert F. Wagner, of the Senate Banking Committee, and in the House by Chairman Henry B. Steagall, of the House Banking Committee. Both bills would amend the 1937 housing act to provide for increased "slum clearance" activities through issuance and sale of bonds.

In a speech at Columbia, S. C., Postmaster General Farley defended the spending program and declared the previous recovery program "did get us back to a state of affairs where dividends and business profits were among the commonplaces of industry and farming."

Demands for specific inclusion of a program of water projects in the spending bill were voiced at a special meeting yesterday of leaders of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. Coincidently, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved an outlay of $118,000,000 for flood control and $119,020,000 for rivers and harbors in the next fiscal year—an aggregate increase of $30,000,000 over House appropriations.

Seeks Action on Bill.

At the White House, the President conferred with Chairman John J. O'Connor of the House Rules Committee, which will open hearings Thursday on a new wage-hour bill replacing the one it refused to give preference to last session. Mr. Roosevelt told reporters he believed O'Connor would work for a favorable report on the bill. The President reiterated that he is still seeking action on the measure.

The industrial co-operation statement released by SEC Commissioner Hanes, over signatures of 16 prominent business leaders, referred to the President's address to the Nation on April 14 and said Mr. Roosevelt "stated the common need and aspiration of us all—the resumption of normal industry."

"To bring about this result calls for teamwork on the part of the Government and industry," continued the statement.

"We gather from the President's words that he recognizes that we live under an industrial system in which there must be full opportunity for legitimate profits. This industrial system cannot function unless there is continuous activity and steady production. It is the desire and responsibility of business to maintain that activity to the fullest extent commensurate with sound practices. It is the responsibility of Government to protect and encourage the proper functioning of business. The President has indicated in his speech that he fully recognizes this and Congress by its recent acts has shown similar recognition.

"Wide but honest differences of opinion exists as to ways and means, but surely no one can doubt that the goal which every citizen desires to reach is to advance the national income to a point where employment and prosperity can be widespread. The effort to attain this goal requires the co-operation of every member of the community.

Oppose Untried Theories.

"It seems to us most important that we should all resolve to encourage the President in every effort he shall make to restore confidence and normal business conditions and to support Congress in the position that its legislative program should be directed toward national recovery for employer and employe alike, rather than towards the enactment of legislation based upon untried social and economic theories."

Hanes said both Young and Aldrich were "most helpful" in drafting the statement but said every signer made his contribution to the text. He said he had been seeking to bring the group together in a common expression for the last three weeks and that the President in a "general way" had known of his efforts.

Other Signers.

Besides Young and Aldrich, the names of the signers together with the broad cross-section of business they represent were as follows:

Alfred L. Aiken, president of the New York Life Insurance Co.; Charles A. Cannon, president, Cannon Cotton Mills; Walter J. Cummings, chairman, Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co.; Frederick H. Ecker, chairman, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; John M. Franklin, president, International Mercantile Co.; Robert M. Hanes, president, Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.; Robert Wood Johnson, president, Johnson & Johnson; Thomas I. Parkinson, president, Equitable Life Assurance Society; William C. Potter, chairman, Guaranty Trust Co., New York; S. Clay Williams, chairman, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.; Clarence M. Woolley chairman and president, American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corp.; Robert E. Cabell, president, Armour & Co.; Edward D. Duffield, president, Prudential Insurance Co.; Sidney G. McAllister, president, International Harvester.

Although Congressional leaders were slow to read into the statement any indorsement of the new spending-lending drive, they expressed satisfaction with the tenor of the expression.

"I am gratified," said Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, "to know that a large number of industrialists and bankers are willing to co-operate in helping to carry out the President's program for stimulation of production and employment throughout the country."

Aviation Is Given New Angle in 'Test Pilot,' Starring Gable, Myrna Loy, Tracy and Barrymore

Film Coming to the Palace Screen Reveals Great Physical and Emotional Strength in Preview; Increases Wonder at Lindbergh's Feat; That Cat Is Here Again; Tommy Riggs Leaves; Theater Notes.

ALTHOUGH I never heard anyone shout "contact" while the picture was being run off, there is a terrific impact in "Test Pilot."

This is the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, costarring Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy, that will be seen on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning Friday. It was unspooled for the ladies and gentlemen of the press (sic) and a group of aviation experts in the Twentieth Century-Fox private projection room—and what a hot and stuffy place that was!—yesterday afternoon. I think I am speaking for the entire assemblage when I say that the film unwound itself with a cumulative effect that added up to a thoroughly exciting few hours of screen-gazing.

BELL.

The impact to which I refer is no less emotional than it is physical. There is a warm and tender story at the bottom of this new approach to the problem of flying, as conceived by that former aviator and distinguished playwright, Frank Wead. It plumbs deeply into the reactions of wives and sweethearts who are most concerned with the hazards of the air. And there are hazards in the air, no matter what anyone may tell you to the contrary. But there is nothing in "Test Pilot" that should do anything but reassure the prospective traveler by plane.

Here is a story that is unlike any other dealing with the "wingmen" that the screen ever has reflected. It has nothing to do with Army, commercial or private flying, but dedicates itself exclusively to those heroic young men, working under tremendous nervous tension, who make sure that planes are safe before they ever are entered into the respective services for which they were intended. These young men take a few chances. They "bail out," when too high a speed clips the wings off their ships, and they go 30,000 feet high when the requirement is that the plane only establish itself as a piece of mechanism capable of making 28,000.

But the major "kick" of the picture is derived from the nerve-wracking anxiety of those closely related to the fliers, who remain on the ground and count the ticks of the clock as a meager measure of the probable time their loved ones have to live. It is in this aspect of the picture that those cast in the principal roles manifest their greatest skill. Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy, Lionel Barrymore and a considerable number of others lend a completely devastating touch to this exposition of a specialized form of flirting with death.

There is never any intention here of according a picture a formal review within an hour or two of the time it is previewed and several days before it is presented to the public, but, since I never yield to anything but temptation, I cannot resist the impulse to say that "Test Pilot" is one of the most engrossing pictures of its kind this column ever has seen. It is flawlessly produced and acted with incomparable skill.

I would not be sure that Spencer Tracy does not "steal the show" except for the uncommonly fine work done by Mr. Gable, Miss Loy and Mr. Barrymore. That leaves just a bit of doubt in my mind. It may be Miss Loy who steals it, or Mr. Gable, or Mr. Barrymore. At any rate it is stolen completely out of the range of mediocrity by someone.

You will have to make up your own mind who the culprit is.

When those giant four-motor Army bombing planes were being taken into the air on their test flights, one thought constantly haunted what is still laughingly referred to as my mind. That was the unbelievable contrast between them and that fragile little mosquito in which Col. Charles Lindbergh first flew the Atlantic to land at Le Bourget in triumph and with everlasting renown appended to his name. When the Spirit of St. Louis was anchored for all to see off Hains Point, it gave the impression of being a toy that hardly could be expected to fly the Potomac, let alone the Atlantic. Wait until you see these four-motor babies! Boy, are they ships! "Flying hotels" is what they are called in the picture, and that is approximately what they are.

So that tough young guy that hangs around the Willard Hotel got in his licks again last night.

He wasn't content with staying downstairs, where he belongs, but had to tip the Variety Club up on end. He practically broke up the party and only missed annoying Allan Jones, headlining at Loew's Capitol this week, by an eyelash, or a whisker, or something. Maybe I had something to do with it.

Anyhow, the Variety clubrooms, on the second floor, were invaded at about 1:30 a. m., by this young vagrant, out, as usual, for no good.

He annoyed Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wonders, of the Warner organization; Ol' Massa Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, just back from a convention in Cleveland; Dr. and Mrs. Archie Engel, all of the Dikeman family and divers and sundry others, by his pernicious habit of being too friendly. It seems to me his weakness is all on the side of virtue, but there are those who hold an opposite opinion. Maybe superstition has something to do with it.

At any rate, there still are many who do not like little black kittens. I do.

Tommy Riggs will conclude his engagement at the Earle Theater today. Riggs and "Betty Lou" will board a train for New York after the last performance tonight to prepare their continuity for the Rudy Vallee broadcast, on which they are weekly features—or a weekly feature, however you feel about it. Riggs and "Betty Lou" are almost as inseparable in the public mind as Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. The remainder of the Earle's current stage bill will remain intact, with "There's Always a Woman"—and isn't it the truth?—continuing to panic audiences as the screen feature of the entertainment. "The Girl in the Moon," one of the season's novelties, also is to be seen at every performance. And that is something.

• • • •

There is a little traveling going on. Frank La Falce, in charge of Warner advertising and publicity in Washington, and Harry Anger, director of stage productions at the Earle, are playing around Broadway—they call it working—and Sam and Jake Flax, two of the Capital's veteran film exchange managers, are on their annual junket to the West Coast. How these boys do get around. I wouldn't be sure what they get around, but they get around!

Helen Hayes announced yesterday that she will appear in only one Eastern engagement of "The Merchant of Venice." The star of "Victoria Regina," now on tour, will be seen as Portia at Robert F. Cutler's County Theater, Suffern, N. Y., for two weeks, beginning Monday evening, August 29. This will be Miss Hayes' second appearance at the County Theater—not far from her home in Nyack, by the way. Three years ago she appeared there in George Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra." It seems quite a while ago that Helen made her juvenile debut with the old Columbia Players on F street.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., April 26.—I went to see "Four Men and a Prayer," and behold I ran slap bang into a travelogue. Only a pair of scissors could have snipped you from Washington to Paris to South America and on to Egypt before you could bat one eye, let alone two.

HEDDA HOPPER.

The four men were fine, with David Niven having the edge on the other three. Grand how that sense of humor of his develops its own radiance in each picture. George Sanders did a fine job, too, with what he had to work with. Also Bill Henry. The new importation, Richard Greene, will have to give me something more than a dimple and a pleasant voice.

All four should have been on their knees praying for a better story—and a new designer for Loretta Young. It's okay if our glamor girls want to turn into comic Valentines. Loretta wore a little number, while strolling through rural England, which must have cost well over $2,000 in furs alone. She looked like a glorified trapper's bride. Perched on one side of her head was a three-tiered Daniel Boone cap, minus the tail. Later she wore half an over-sized cantaloupe, painted white. And the highest frizzled bang and longest page-boy bob of the season. Which made her beautiful face look twice its length.

I had no idea until I saw "Four Men and a Prayer" that Buckingham Palace could be so cosy. Loretta waited behind a pillar while the boys got a Victoria Cross. Then all joined hands to a rousing British tune, marched down the hall and—I suppose—into London's dazzling sunshine.

A man sitting back of me at the preview said to his companion, "If you ever wear hats like those, I'll divorce you." The battle was on.

Which reminds me of my manicurist when she received a bottle of black fingernail polish. For a laugh she used it on the nails of one hand. When hubby came to call for her she held it up and said, "Look, darling, isn't it marvelous?" He roared, "You take that stuff right off or I won't speak to you." He didn't for three days. It was their first quarrel. She hasn't tried any fancy tricks or polish since.

Did you ever watch a famous hat creator create? I did. It was at a garden luncheon party, given for a visiting New York designer. Using a male guest as a model, he utilized everything on the table in rapid succession. First, a plate upside down, held on by a napkin tied under the chin (I fear me that is how the chin strap was born), bunches of grapes held by the ears and shooting off the front, a bunch of bananas. Another he made out of three lamb chops, sitting in a pot of parsley. A few months later I saw those models being sold in one of our smart shops.

From Paris comes the latest Jeweled eyelashes made of purple and blue sapphires, fitted over your own. How they glitter with every turn of the eye. I'll say. Stones are the size of a pencil point, and stuck on the end of human hair. Now if we can only use grandma's discarded bustle for a new face we'll really have something. Which should land us all in the asylum for the feeble-minded. Where we can begin again from scratch.

Almost Circus.

For a noncircus picture, the new musical comedy, "Tropic Holiday," sets a Hollywood record for animals and fowls. In scenes with Martha Raye, Bob Burns, Dorothy Lamour and Ray Milland there are fighting bulls, oxen, burros, geese, chickens, cats, dogs and even a turtle.

Dad's Nickname.

Col. and Mrs. Bob Burns have named their newborn daughter Barbara Ann so they can nickname her Babs. The youngster arrived while her bazooka-playing father was at work in the new musical picture, "Tropic Holiday."

Conferees Offer Five-Point Plan For Railroads

RFC Equipment Loans Head Program Urged Upon Congress.

By the Associated Press.

Federal, railroad and labor leaders advanced yesterday a five-point "minimum program" for railroad legislation at the present session of Congress.

Loans to railroads for the purchase of equipment—with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation taking the equipment as security—headed the program.

The conferees also suggested work loans for railroads agreeing to replace men who have been furloughed since October.

The third point was that for 12 months the Interstate Commerce Commission should not be required to certify that loan-seeking railroads can be expected to meet their fixed charges without reorganization.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the RFC and Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, spokesman for the conferees, said these loans would not be made, however, unless the railroads could offer adequate security.

The final points in the program were continuance of grade separation work at Government expense and that the Government bear "its just proportion of the expense" when it orders railroads to put in bridges to accommodate water transportation.

Another development in the rail transportation situation was announcement by the Association of American Railroads that its members would meet in Chicago Friday for further discussions of railroad wages and rates.

A directors' meeting will be held tomorrow, to be followed the next day by a general meeting of the association's members.

The railroads are asking labor to take a reduction in wages, presumably about 10 per cent. They also are discussing the possibility of asking for an additional increase in freight rates.

The Interstate Commerce Commission allowed the railroads to put into effect last month freight-rate increases averaging about 5.3 per cent. The carriers had asked 15 per cent.

Both Jones and Wheeler said they regarded the program as one that could be put through this session of Congress.

Among the conferees were J. J. Pelley, representing rail management; George M. Harrison, representing rail labor; Chairman Lea (Democrat), of California, of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee; Commissioner Charles D. Mahaffie, of the I. C. C.; R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the railroad association; Cassius M. Clay, chief railroad counsel of the R. F. C., and W. C. Costello, Jones' administrative assistant.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, meanwhile, approved a bill by Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, abolishing reductions of Government rates over land-grant rail lines—taking the first Congressional action on a recommendation by the I. C. C. Committee, named by President Roosevelt to study railroad needs.

The measure provides that the full rate shall apply to Government transportation after July 1, 1938. The existing rate over land-grant roads is 50 per cent of the regular charge.

In an address before the Chicago Traffic Club yesterday, Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman of the ICC, said he favored an investigation into the railroad labor controversy, saying it "would clear the air."

"I suggest Commissioner Eastman stay within his oath of office and not suggest violation of the law," replied Harrison.

"The President has the right to name a fact-finding committee only after all the machinery of the railway labor law has been complied with.

"The commissioner doesn't know anything about wage rates and his opinion is of no value."

Senator Donahey Chosen to Head TVA Investigation

The TVA investigating committee chose Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, to be its chairman last night and discussed plans for starting the inquiry promptly. Representative Meade (Democrat), of New York, was named vice chairman.

Democrats held that last night's actions were informal, and formal action should be deferred until a regularly called meeting, so Donahey and Mead were "nominated," subject to confirmation today.

Committee members indicated several weeks might elapse before hearings can be begun, since they are considering sending special investigators into TVA offices here and in the Tennessee valley.

National Academy of Science President Awards Medals

Men Go Through Life at Angles, Savant Tells Conferees Here

Born on the Bias, Babies Grow Up to Write, Play Golf Lopsided; Scientists Told Horned Camels Once Roamed North America.

Human beings go through life at an angle and this behavior pattern is evident immediately after birth.

This was reported to the National Academy of Sciences yesterday by Dr. Arnold Gesell, director of the Clinic of Child Development, Yale University.

The child's first motions are at an angle. He later learns to move his arms and legs symmetrically. But throughout life most of his motions are at an angle.

The country's most select scientific body also heard:

Praise of Willis Rodney Whitney, vice president in charge of scientific research of the General Electric Co., as he received the gold Pubic Service Medal.

Praise of Dr. Edgar Johnson Allen, director emeritus of the Plymouth Laboratory of Marine Biological Association of the United Kingdom, as he was awarded the gold Agassiz Medal for oceanography.

That models set up to imitate living cells gave the "appearance of perpetual motion" and appeared to defy the most fundamental law of the uiverse.

That camels which "looked as though they came from nightmares" formerly lived in North America, the original home of camels.

That an American first discovered Antartica in 1820.

The first four weeks of life the baby lies with his head consistently to one side or the other, Dr. Gesell explained. His fencing-like motions are toward the side to which his head is turned. His motions are then at an angle.

Learns to Look Up.

After this time the baby learns to lie on his back with his head faced directly upward. At this time he learns how to move his arms and legs symmetrically.

"This is the pattern throughout life," Dr. Gesell said. "The motions are first one-sided and at an angle. Then the child learns symmetrical movements. New problems which the child—and the adult—attacks are first from an angle. In fact, most motions of life are at an angle, such as writing and playing golf."

Experiments giving the appearance of perpetual motion were reported by W. J. V. Osterhout and J. W. Murray, of Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

The experimenters set up models to imitate living cells. In the bottom of a glass tube shaped like a "U" they placed a mixture of water and guaiacol, a drug similar to carbolic acid. In certain circumstances it is believed that the drug acts like wall of living cells and that similar events may occur in living cells.

Distilled water was placed in both arms of the tube above the mixture. Then in one arm was placed trichloroacetic acid, similar to, but stronger than, the acid in vinegar. The acid lowered the freezing point and therefore the activity of the water in that arm of the tube.

According to the second law of thermodynamics the pure water in the other arm should have flowed toward the water containing the acid. But the motion was in the opposite direction. When a similar tube was placed upside down on top of the U tube, the action was repeated many times, resulting in apparent perpetual motion.

The scientists hope to repeat the experiment using actually living cells to see if it will shed light on living processes.

Camels With Horns.

Only home of camels until times just before the Ice Ages was North America, William B. Scott, of Princeton University, reported. Some of the many members of the family which lived here had horns growing from their heads.

Only two members of the camel family are now living, the true camel of Asia and the llama of South America. But in times of recorded history in Europe, camels lived in this country which were larger than elephants. A skeleton has been found which stood 11 feet at the shoulders.

Other camels ranged downward to only a foot high. The skulls of some could almost be covered by a half dollar.

Lawrence Martin, division of maps and charts, Library of Congress, presented evidence that Capt. Nathaniel Brown Palmer, of Stonington, Conn., was the first to discover the Antarctica in November 15, 16 and 17, 1820.

He showed facsimiles of logbook of the Hero, commanded by the 21-year-old captain, and showed evidence that his discovery was authentic.

"The fact of American discovery of the mainland of this continent is of importance to the Government of the United States in 1938," he said. "The same is true of the exploration of adjacent islands in the Antarctic sector south of Cape Horn where the breached volcanic crater of Deception Island in the South Shetlands contains a harbor of importance in the present day whaling industry.

"In 1928-29 this region produced 1,047,000 barrels of whale oil, valued at more than $2,500,000. This harbor has been used as an aviation base during modern Antarctic exploration and might conceivably be used as a commercial refueling station or even as an American naval base."

Medals Given.

The Public Welfare Medal was presented to Dr. Whitney in recognition of his "outstanding work in the fundamentals of scientific research for the public good." The presentation address was made by Dr. Albert W. Hull. In 1900 Dr. Whitney started to organize the company's scientific laboratory.

The Agassiz Medal was presented to Dr. Allen in recognition of his "personal researches on marine biology and the great influence which he has exerted on the study of marine organisms in their relation to marine environment." It was received for him by Leader McCormick-Goodhart of the British Embassy.

Demagogues 'Use' Hungry, White Asserts

Editor Sees U.S. Unbalance as a Thrust at Democracy.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette, said tonight that "demagogues are trading the votes of hungry men for permanence in office."

Addressing the Economic Club of New York on "Can it Happen to Us?" he defined this as a "new situation" and asserted that "politically we are looking squarely at a rather unpleasant manifestation of democracy."

"But don't think the Democrats who are now in power are any worse than the Republicans, who are out, would be in their place," he added. "The unbalance of our system is deeper than politics. It is part of a world-wide thrust at the heart of the democratic system.

"Our American democracy is deep rooted, yet it is not immune to the black plague of autocracy which is slowly blighting Europe. The problem of this century is to maintain for the man with exceptional talents an exceptional income and at the same time guarantee to the common man with the common talents a decent standard of living where he may thrive in self-respect."

White declared the people of the United States "have one thing in common, these groups and parties, clans and classes. It is an abiding love of liberty and a deep, shivering fear of losing it."

It Takes 3 Aides Of Mr. Morgan to Produce 1 Nickel

By the Associated Press.

Dean Acheson, lawyer, had difficulty floating a 5-cent loan from the House of Morgan yesterday.

In a recess at a securities commission hearing, the lawyer for the stock exchange asked Thomas W. Lamont and Arthur Anderson, Morgan partners, for a nickel to make a phone call. Neither had one.

Charles Dickey, another partner, fished in his pockets, produced a 5-cent piece and lent it without security.

Mgr. E. A. Pace, Noted Catholic Educator, Dies

Vice Rector Emeritus at Catholic U. Was Well-known Psychologist.

The Right Rev. Edward Aloysius Pace, 76, vice rector emeritus of Catholic University, died yesterday at Providence Hospital.

Last rites, at which Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, will officiate, will be held Friday at 10 a. m., in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University. The sermon will be preached by Dr. Ignatius Smith, professor of philosophy at Catholic University. Mgr. Pace will be buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Associated with Catholic University since 1888, a year before the institution opened its doors, Mgr. Pace was appointed professor of philosophy in 1891. He retained the post for 44 years, until ill health forced his retirement from all academic work early in 1935. He served from 1924 to 1935 as vice rector of the university.

Despite his teaching and administrative duties at Catholic University, Dr. Pace found time to help establish the Catholic Encyclopedia, of which he was an associate editor. He wrote many philosophical and educational articles for the work, including treatises on absolutism, quietism, spiritism, pantheism, biographies of various educators and philosophers, and discussions of theological questions.

A brilliant scholar, Dr. Pace was instrumental in the foundation of the Catholic University Bulletin, Catholic Educational Review, New Scholasticism, Studies in Psychology and Psychiatry, and Psychological Monographs, all scientific publications.

Born in Starke, Fla., July 3, 1861, Mgr. Pace was educated in Florida and at St. Charles College, Ellicott City, Md., where he received an A. B. degree in 1880. Within the next dozen years he was awarded degrees of bachelor and doctor of sacred theology at Rome and a Ph. D. at Leipzig. His first pastorate was at St. Augustine, Fla.

After being invited to serve as professor of psychology at Catholic University, which was then in process of organization, Dr. Pace in 1888 revisited Europe, where he studied in the psychological laboratories of Louvain, Leipzig and Paris. On his return, he began four decades of active teaching at Catholic University.

One of the founders of Trinity College, Washington, Dr. Pace also taught at Catholic Sisters College here and at other Catholic institutions of learning. Three years ago, the fiftaeth anniversary of the ordination of Dr. Pace was marked by Catholic University when it conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. The citation stated that "he is in very truth our university's special pride and glory." Archbishop Curley presented the diploma.

A few days earlier, Pope Pius XI had granted Mgr. Pace dispensation permitting him to celebrate mass while seated. Msgr. Pace had been in delicate health some years, and in January, 1934, one of his legs was amputated at Providence Hospital. He rarely left the hospital from that time on.

He is survived by his sister, Miss Elizabeth Pace, and brother, Charles Pace, financial clerk of the Senate. Both reside at 1851 Columbia road northwest. Another sister, Miss Mary Pace, died two months ago.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Coolidge Quartet (William Kroll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicolas Moldaven and Victor Gottlieb) Tuesday night in the Coolidge Auditorium. Program: Quartet No. 1 in A (Aleksandr Borodin), Quartet, Op. 50 (Sergei Prokofiev), Quartet No. 4 in A minor (Aleksandr Glazunov).

Russian composers of three generations had their places on the fifth program which the Coolidge Quartet presented last evening for the delectation of an appreciative audience. Between the natal dates of Borodin and Glazunov is a gap of 31 years, while 26 years separate Glazunov and Prokofiev, although the latter interval, thanks to the acceleration of musical evolution, seems much longer.

Borodin is the perfect example of the instinctive musician who writes from a mysterious compulsion unrelated to his other activities. He began to compose when he was 13, and with comparatively little instruction learned to play the flute, piano and violoncello. His musical theory he acquired by reading and analyzing the works of others, and while all this was going on, he was pursuing a career which brought him to a position of authority in medical chemistry.

This spontaneous quality of his artistic personality was recognized by himself as a gift for which he claimed no credit. His scientific accomplishments, in which he consciously labored, meant more to him than his musical attainments. "As a composer," he once remarked, "I wish to remain incognito, and I am annoyed at having to acknowledge my works." His self-abnegation stands at the opposite pole from the overweening egotism of Wagner.

In his first string quartet, engagingly set forth last night by William Kroll and his associates, he did little more than meditate upon a theme from the last movement of Beethoven's great quartet in B flat major. That theme led him, however, into some charming by-ways of poetic reverie and into such ingenious experiments as the section for muted strings and harmonica in the scherzo movement.

Glazunov, the favorite pupil of Rimski-Korsakov, belongs with those internationally minded Russians who can at will take on the coloration of European culture or retain their national characteristics. In his A minor quartet there is scarcely any Slavic atmosphere and abundance of affiliation with the German school. It is for the most part robust music, richly harmonized and vitally energized. Particularly effective is the scherzo which terminates as a study in increasing tempo with the first violin playing a spinning-wheel theme.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Divorced From Bestial Inebriate, Should Woman Chance Marriage to 'Clubman' Type of Drinker?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 38 years old. After 11 years of married life, I obtained my divorce in 1932 from a man who ruined a most promising career and became a beast through drink. I am engaged to be married this June to a man whom I have known for three years. Four years my senior, he has never been married. He is alert, personable, well-educated and much sought after, socially. He has risen steadily in his profession since his service in the Army during the World War.

• • • •

The president of his firm, in my presence, has called him a "thoroughbred," the opinion held by all of his friends whom I have met. He always appears to be in splendid physical form and engages actively and strenuously in such sports as swimming, golf, tennis and riding. He visits Washington practically every week-end and we attend social affairs together. I have been amazed at times by his capacity for liquor, although I have never seen him intoxicated. Jovial, yes, but never objectionable.

• • • •

However, during recent months reports have come to me from several sources to the effect that for years (since leaving the Army, in fact), my fiance has been an inveterate drinker. That before breakfast, for example, he always has two or three drinks of whisky; that several times a day he leaves his office for highballs at nearby cafes; that he seldom, if ever, retires at night without having consumed enough liquor to stupefy the average person. His social and business success caused me to doubt such reports until they came from sources both reliable and unmalicious.

• • • •

On his last visit to Washington I chided him about his reputation for being a heavy drinker. With complete frankness he acknowledged that for nearly 20 years his average daily consumption of intoxicating liquor has been close to a quart. His father does so; his grandfather did before him. His father, whom I have met on several occasions, is very much the clubman and night owl, 65 years of age or thereabouts, with the general bearing of a robust, healthy, alert man of 50. My fiance claims that his family is immune to the adverse effects of intoxicants.

• • • •

In no way do my fiance's confessed drinking habits seem to have affected his business activities or his physical condition. He manages his personal finances exceedingly well. His career seems to rest on the firmest foundation. Yet I am filled with apprehension and foreboding. The last five years of my marriage were a nightmare of crashing hopes, aspirations and ideals. Can any human being continuously drink a quart of intoxicating liquor daily without eventual physical, mental and moral collapse? Is any person "immune?" I shall be most grateful for your opinions. C. W.

Psychiatrist's Viewpoint.

DEAR C. W.: A psychiatrist of my acquaintance who knows, through professional contacts and study, the effects of chronic alcoholism on human physiology and personality, says (bluntly): "Any man who claims hereditary or individual immunity to the wear and tear of a daily intake of a quart of hard liquor is a damn liar." He says, further, that "chronic drinking in any form is 'bad'" and, finally, that "11 years' marriage to a drunkard should be enough to teach any sensible woman not to put her faith in another man of the same sort in future."

• • • •

He feels, as I do, that your own mental attitude toward alcoholism and alcoholics would prove to be the initial interfering factor in marriage; that the fact that painful experience has conditioned you to an involuntary and highly emotional reaction of apprehension and foreboding when the thought of marrying a whisky addict presents itself, is the most pertinent reason why you should not marry this man.

• • • •

Where another woman who had had no experience with drunkards might marry such a man and move happily through marriage in an armour of blithe ignorance of the dynamite lying just beneath the surface of her life (thus letting sleeping dogs lie, so to speak) a woman of your experience would be living in daily and hourly dread of the worst, and by her anxious anticipation would do much to conjure that worst into active existence.

• • • •

For instance, your automatic reaction after marriage (supposing you were to marry this man) would be to try to disarm the enemy; would be to attempt to reform your husband of his before-breakfast and before-retiring drinking habits. You might plead the harm to himself, or your own distaste for the spectacle, or the effect on his breakfast appetite, or the effect on his bedtime breath, the waste of money, the sheer nonsensical indulgence of it, or any other argument that might occur to a feminine mind alert to a potential enemy of her happiness and determined to overcome it.

• • • •

And your every argument would be adding fuel to the flame of his determination to preserve his independence against wifely invasion. His drinking would become finally, not merely a pleasantly self-indulgent habit of 20 years' standing, but a bitter gesture of open defiance of your puritanical nagging (for as such would he construe it). He would begin in time, no doubt, to lay much of the blame for your first husband's drinking at your door. (It's remarkable how alcoholics rally to the defense of each other, when rationalizing their enslavement to the bottle. To hear them tell it, some woman is usually villainously responsible.)

This man's abnormal thirst for intoxicants is not to be dismissed as a negligible factor when taking stock of his eligibility as a husband, no matter what his current professional and social rating may be. Perhaps his family's social position, means, or long-standing reputation for achievement plays an important part in discounting certain idiosyncracies of behavoir that would not be tolerated in a man forced to start from scratch in making a respected name for himself.

• • • •

In labeling him "a thoroughbred," the head of his firm may have had reference to the stock from which he comes. Also, you must remember that a certain class of society considers it a mark of aristocracy to be able to drink one's self into unconsciousness without passing through an intermediate stage of utter bestiality. Of such men it is said that "they carry their liquor like gentlemen." However, just as no man is a hero to his valet, no husband who drinks continually is ever tolerable to the embrace of a wife who entertains deeply branded scars of resentment against the potential destructiveness of alcoholism; and this remains true, no matter how "gentlemanly" is his conduct when under the influence of drink. Also, have you thought of children—and would you care to bear a child into a family which boasted of its tradition of hard-drinking men?

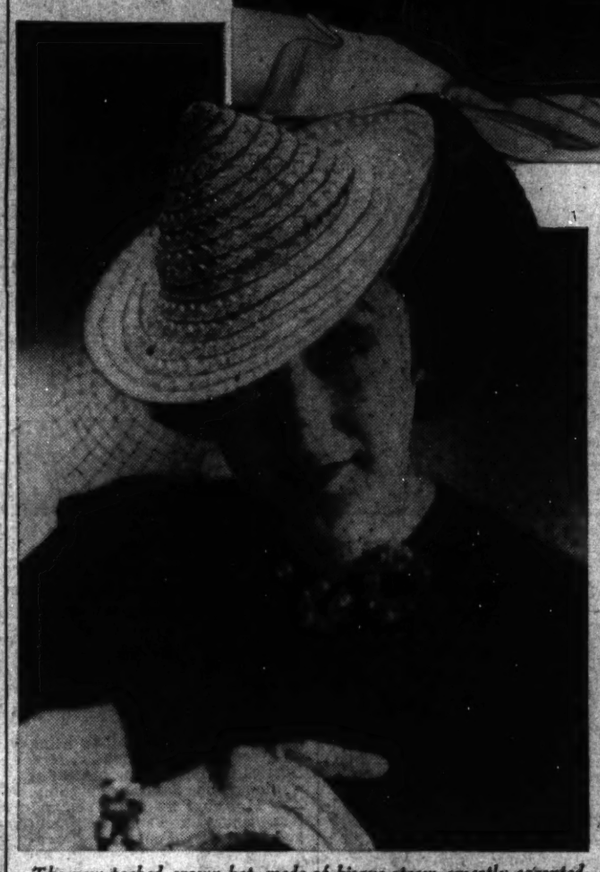
Before reaching a final decision in this problem (which in my opinion should be an irrevocable "no") I suggest you inquire into the private lives and happiness of this man's mother and grandmother. Learn how your prospective mother-in-law is bearing up under the strain of being the wife of a man who is "very much the clubman and night owl," and how like, or how different she is to you in temperament and experience. If she has, unhappily, departed this life, find out how much worry had to do with it. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Wardrobe of Accessories an Aid to Budget

Starched white pique, with crown and long streamers of wide-meshed navy veiling, distinguish this high toque by Sally Victor. May either be tied under the chin or allowed to hang down the back.

A voluminous handbag of unusual shape in bright-colored alligator, by Koret; note the clever two-handle treatment. In cornflower blue, cyclamen pink, butterscotch, copper.



The new peaked-crown hat, made of bisque straw, smartly accented with a navy blue taffeta bandeau and navy veil which falls longer on one side than the other, by Harryson. The head costume jewelry echoes the effective two-color theme.

New Accessories Perk Up Clothes For Late Spring

Should Be Planned to Fit Into Summer Wardrobe

IF YOU ARE one of those persons who tire of your clothes easily, the answer is—a few dresses and many accessories. The interest in accessories continues unabated and should be taken into account in planning late spring and summer wardrobes.

Not only do the right accents give style to any outfit, but provide a means of varying ensembles and thus give aid to the budget. As the season advances, white accessories are coming more into the picture and the early summer is destined to see more of the ever popular black and white and navy and white combinations.

The Duchess of Windsor and other fashion leaders have included much black in their spring clothes, according to recent reports and are using both white and colored accessories. Black and maize is a combination that is assuming increasing importance.

Flowers continue in popularity, being the keynote of both daytime and evening costumes. Matching gloves and bags are important. Alligator accents in shoes and bags are especially chic, and these come in pastel as well as in the hardier colors. Costume jewelry of all types, especially in massive styles, continues to accent all types of costumes.

Veils have been a godsend to the woman who has a small hat allowance. With a few yards of veiling she can work wonders, draping it in all sorts of fashion, with streamers or bows under the chin, or drawing it back tightly across, a style particularly effective if she has a small face. Colored veils are becoming more popular as summer approaches. A favorite veiling effect with Parisians is green, blue or russet veiling on natural straw or white panama.

Pique is a material that will be increasingly seen in accessories—in collars and cuffs, vestee edgings, crisp corsages of flowers, even in hats. While white is the predominant pique color, it also appears in pastel shades, notably pale blue.

Gilets and frills are an important late spring accessory, as they will do service in summer. Organdy is the chief material used for these.

All sorts of little jackets are appearing to give variety and accent to costumes, and are worn for sports, evening and daytime, in materials including cotton, silks, leather, suede and lace.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, April 26.

CONEY ISLAND has had her first million-Sunday, and the Palm Beach of the Proletariat is herself again! Coney Island, with its huge boardwalk, littered sands, noisy merry-go-rounds and need I mention people? Coney Island is the seashore to millions—it represents, in spite of its shoddiness, sunshine, ocean, air and sand on which to lie. It isn't much—but it's the best they have!

ALICE HUGHES

The first bright, warm April Sunday brings out the first crowd of a million, and Coney is again off to the races for the summer. From now on the Sabbath figures will mount with the mercury, and in the dead of summer they may mount to 2,000,000. On such a day Coney is as close to hell as a human could tolerate this side Jordan.

But there's one rather important variation at Coney Island this year. The ballyhoo boys screamed and bellowed when their sideshows were ruled out by License Commissioner Moss, in the belief that the abolition of these familiar carnival figures will cut down the island's noise. It's a lovely thought, but I doubt that the edict will make much difference in Coney's decibels. I don't believe anything on earth could calm down such a resort but the sudden and complete destruction of the human race.

Anyhow, these efforts to shush Coney Island make me slightly ill. Dignify, beautify and sober this howling bedlam and you have nothing but a very dull stretch of unlovely seaside crawling with hundreds of thousands of people. As it is, all the regulars seem to have their notion of a good time, and the casual visitor shakes her head and says she wouldn't believe it if she didn't see and hear it. Coney is unique—slick it up, and you've got just another carbon copy. Who's a commissioner to try to improve the taste and desires of the underprivileged thousands of New York! I'll bet Coney's millions have ten times the fun that the loafers on Bailey's Beach at Newport do! See Coney once, like Naples—and die!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The great game of bingo is going under the bene here very rapidly as a gambling menace to public morals. No longer can it be used as a money lure for charity, however worthy, in our enormous Borough of the Bronx—for it has rapidly become a big gambling set-up for the cash-and-carry boys. My spouse shakes his raddled head over the whole matter, for in his day he was bingo champion of Chevy Chase Lake, Washington, and won a lensless camera. And all of a sudden his major sport becomes a major national vice.

Not all our girls play bingo for lucre. Can you believe that one of our public libraries features the fine old art of reading aloud each Wednesday evening? Yes, ma'm, on East Seventy-ninth street we can all hear Miss Nona Plummer, librarian, read to us from Benet's "The Devil and Daniel Webster" and Clarence Day's "Life With Mother." Now girls, don't tell me you have to go dancing and drinking that night!

• • • •

I'm still brooding about that Sultan of Johore who divorced his Scottish wife by just saying "talak" four times. Meaning, simply but firmly, "get out!" Is it to be wondered that most of our women prefer to live under their present laws rather than that of Mohammed? Imagine Daddy getting home from work and giving us four "talaks!" In return, he would get four coffee cups on or about the face.

• • • •

Have you had a chance to listen to our old pal Kate Smith as a commentator rather than a sweet singer? Nor have I, but I mean to do so, for Kate is a wise girl, and may very well have worthy things to say.

• • • •

Ten thousand people jammed the mighty Pennsy Terminal to greet Auntie Mae West the other day—and she was also met by four detectives, assigned to guard the noted tragedienne from thieves and letter-writers! She glittered with gems. "Just my summer stuff," she drawled, "about $200,000 worth!"

"The El" used to mean the elevated railroad here (curse the things!) Now it may be El Chico, El Gaucho, El Dorado, El Morocco, or El Favorita, to name a few. Just night clubs catering to the current rage for red-hot rhumbas and rumdrinks. And often, I must confess, as rackety and demoralizing as the original El. No—our Caribbean friends didn't help the noise situation much!

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

On Being Poised.

Well, if Greta Garbo can be perfectly poised, you can! That's the chief thing she's got anyway, that slow smile, that deliberate movement, that controlled countenance. And here you are always leaping around like a chicken with its head cut off. No wonder you can't be charming.

Well, you will just show everybody. You are going downtown shopping and this time you will be poised if it kills you.

• • • •

As you leave the house you see a bus approaching your corner. Can you make it? Yes, if—No, you will not run! Imagine Garbo running for a bus.

You stroll along gracefully toward the corner and the bus glides rapidly away. You wait 15 minutes valiantly maintaining your poise against a gusty April wind. Toward the end of your wait, old Col. McAddle arrives. You turn to him with a slow smile. "Isn't . . . it . . . it . . a . . beautiful . . day?" you inquire in your best deliberate stage manner.

"What was that?" he asks cupping his hand to his ear.

You remember he is hard of hearing and, abandoning your throaty measured tones, shout the inquiry. He agrees that it is indeed a beautiful day.

The bus comes and you saunter leisurely toward its entrance. "Step up, please," shouts the driver. You step. After all, Garbo has a limousine.

You enter, take a seat and find Col. McAddle beside you. What shall you talk to him about? Oh, well, let him worry. You will sit sweetly composed and reply slowly and charmingly to his questions . .

He doesn't ask any. The silence goes on . . and on . . becomes thunderous. You can stand it no longer. You turn to him and begin shouting nervously that summer is about here.

• • • •

As you leave the bus—and Col. McAddle—you resume your poise. You walk as slowly as you can make yourself. Now that is the way you should always walk—as if life were a Lohengrin wedding march. A street photographer snaps your picture—heretofore you have always been too fast for them—thrusts a folder into your hand. You stick it in your already overstuffed bag.

A small boy intercepts you with the whining plea that you buy shoe laces. You extricate yourself, move on in your holiday stride. A man—young and personable—approaches you with an interested eye. Ah, at last somebody is going to make a pass at you! You have always wondered why strange men never tried to flirt with you—as they did with all your women friends. Why, it was because you never had the come-hither walk—were always in a hurry. No wonder Garbo . . .

"Beg pardon, lady," says the young man lifting his hat, "could I speak to you a moment?"

You stop, turn toward him with your slow, enigmatic smile.

"I wonder, lady, if you could help a fellow get some breakfast . . ."

You give him a quarter and move on—a little faster.

• • • •

You reach the crossing, start across slowly on the green light. It changes to yellow. Firmly controlling yourself, you continue deliberately. A street car clangs, motor cars honk. In a panic you dash madly to the opposite corner, reaching it as an automobile grazes your skirt. You are ashamed of yourself. Now Garbo would never have done that! Still . . . well you just can't imagine her dodging traffic.

In the department store you start all over again. You proceed in the grand manner to the stocking counter, where a three-pair-for-$2.85 sale is in progress. You find yourself elbowed out of turn repeatedly by hurried, determined women. You miss an elevator because you will not run for it and are left standing while all the cars hold a convention at the top. You go to the women's waiting room, see one vacant chair, make for it in your ballroom glide, and find a striding woman with a little boy grabbing it ahead of you. You wedge yourself in on a sofa, find your old friend, Lottie Chitt on the other side of you.

"Isn't . . it . . a . . beautiful . . day?" you begin in your best Garbo manner.

"Yes," she replies, bluntly." Have you heard about Nell . . and Bert?"

You should say you have!

Have you? Did she know that Nell had already left for Reno?

No, she hadn't, but ——

You throw poise to the winds and shrilly shout her down with the details.

Satin for Coats.

Paris (U.P.).—The newest use of satin is for summer coats. One slinky navy blue model is worn over a deep pink satin-back crepe formal. Other color combinations include purple, green and yellow; red, blue and orange stripes; lavender, white and black; in fact, hues that would dim the glory of Joseph's coat.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Grape Juice as Drink.

Grape juice is highly recommended as a source of iron, especially for children who are anemic. In a group of children in an orphanage, it was found that if ten ounces of grape juice daily are added to the diet, the blood becomes richer in iron, and signs of anemia disappear. This also prevents secondary anemia which is quite common in children, especially young children who are on an exclusively milk diet.

On a diet for children which included fresh vegetables and fruits, with adequate quantities of meat, eggs and milk, it was found that if ten ounces of grape juice daily were added, the blood increased in iron approximately twice as much as in a group of children who had the same diet but without the grape juice.

As a beverage, pure and simple, grape juice was popular with the children and well tolerated by all. It is desirable to include the juices of all citrus fruits in the diet of children up to the age of ten years.

One of the most important advances in infant feeding in recent years has been the discovery that an exclusively milk diet is liable to be very low in iron content and may frequently lead to anemia. Grape juice seems to be a pleasant, palatable and effective way to avoid such a situation.

Other foods that have a high iron content are egg yolk, oatmeal, wheat, dried beans, dried peas, spinach and peanuts.

In actual anemia, a condition sometimes exists in the intestine which prevents the absorption of iron which is present in food. In that case, iron in an inorganic form, such as one of the medicinal preparations, must be given.

But in a healthy body when an iron supply is needed to keep the blood up to the proper level, the iron in food is easily available.

Your Figure Madame!

Cycle of 'Proud Lady' Is Reached in Changing Posture Styles.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU WANT TO be in style, your posture must be on the up and up. There is a fashion in posture just as surely as there is a style in hair dress. Jean Spadea, smart fashion illustrator, says that posture changes every decade and that we are now in the "proud lady" cycle.

The Gibson girl, who is still held up to us as a model of beauty and decorum, was sway-backed and walked like a duck. She did have a lovely head carriage, but she carried her chest out and forward instead of up and she pointed her toes out—as she shouldn't!

The next posture change, according to Miss Spadea, began with the willowy Irene Castle. The Castle vogue started a movement which ended in the debutante slouch. The young beauty threw her tummy and head forward and adopted a slinking gait. The bump on the back of her neck, caused by her unnatural posture, was hidden by the long bob.

By the time the first of the glamour girls, with lovely, erect posture, made her appearance, Miss Spadea says that the demand in illustrations was for women posed in the tough, nonchalant manner.

Suddenly, however, the lovely natural posture has become popular. One reason, perhaps, that the beautiful movie stars have improved so consistently in appearance, is because they have acquired superb postures.

There's a fashion in posture; keep yours on the up and up!

Garbo may still be a languid heroine, but she no longer slouches. Myrna Loy has dropped her Oriental slink and is now known as a natural beauty. Joan Crawford no longer struts, and today her posture is really lovely.

If I were to name one movie star whose posture is worth copying by the debs, I believe it would be Paulette Goddard. She is as straight as an arrow, and her irrepressible vitality is reflected in every step she takes.

Importance of Having Natural Carriage Is Emphasized.

An erect carriage can make a good figure superb and a mediocre figure attractive. No posture need be dumpy or humdrum, but the majority of us plod along without realizing that a beautiful carriage can give us confidence and poise and lift us out of our grooves.

Crystal Gazer Foretold Albanian Royal Wedding

Countess Apponyi, Bride of King Zog, Is Half an American; They May Spend Part of Honeymoon in This Country.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

When wedding bells ring in far-off Albania today and a very American-looking, 22-year-old girl becomes the bride of 42-year-old King Ahmed Zog I, a fortune teller's prophecy will come true.

Six months ago Countess Geraldine Apponyi, whose lineage on her mother's side stems from a widely known Virginia family, consulted a crystal gazer in Budapest. It was all by way of diversion on an autumn afternoon, but the Countess listened with special interest as the seer prophesied. "Before the end of the year great things are to come your way . . . You are to marry a handsome man of high rank."

HOPE R. MILLER.

Today, in King Zog's luxurious palace in the Albanian capital, the Hungarian countess, who is half American but has never seen this country, will stand beside the king in a civil ceremony that will make her the first Queen of Albania. Attendants at the wedding will be three erstwhile visitors to Washington, King Zog's sisters, the Princesses Maxhide, Ruhije and Myzejen, who curtailed their American sojourn in order to be back in time for the nuptials. Originally the wedding had been planned for mid-June, but when the date was moved up almost two months, the sister trio sailed homeward in order to be on hand to help complete plans.

Sisters Selected King Zog's Fiancee

Rumors have gone the rounds that the princesses selected their sister-in-law before their brother ever saw her. They met her last summer in Budapest; liked her; told their brother she was an exceptionally attractive young lady, and advised him to make her acquaintance. Accordingly, last December, Countess Apponyi received a special invitation to attend the New Year's Eve ball in the Tirana Royal Palace. The romance, beginning then, will reach its climax at today's wedding—to which Faik Konitza, Albanian Minister to the United States, was invited, and at which two members of the Capital's diplomatic corps will be present. Baron Paul Schell, secretary of the Hungarian Legation, who left Washington recently for a two months' sojourn in his homeland, will be there; also, Nobile Benedetto Capomazza, secretary of the Italian Embassy, who is a close friend of King Zog and his sisters.

Notables from all over Europe are in Tirana for the wedding, which will also be attended by the bride's mother, the former Gladys Virginia Stewart, now Mme. Goutraud Girault, wife of a French army officer. Among the other guests will be the bride's grandmother, Mme. Destrale d'Ekna, wife of a Swedish diplomat, who was Virginia Harding, of Virginia.

The Harding family, coming over from England, settled in Virginia in the Colonial era. During the War between the States, one branch wandered back to New York. It was to that part of the family that the former Gladys Virginia Stewart belonged; and it was in New York that she met Count Julius Apponyi and married him. Shortly afterward, they returned to Budapest. Countess Geraldine Apponyi is the eldest daughter of that union. Her father died in 1924, and a couple of years later her mother married the French officer.

Meanwhile, Geraldine attended Sacred Heart School near Vienna and became an accomplished linguist. She speaks English, French, German and Hungarian, and in recent months has been studying Albanian. Shortly after her engagement to King Zog was announced in midwinter, the bride-elect, who previously was occupied in helping the Hungarian National Museum catalogue the $200,000 Apponyi collection of books, went to Tirana for an extended visit. Since then, she has been busy commuting from there to Paris and Budapest, where she consulted topflight couturiers and selected her trousseau. She bought 20 sport dresses and suits in Budapest; but her wedding gown—a Chanel creation—and most of her accessories are from Paris. Her tiarra, set in diamonds, was fashioned in Vienna.

Widely circulated reports have it that King Zog and his fiancee have considered part of their honeymoon in America. Countess Apponyi, it is said, is particularly eager to visit Virginia, where her Harding ancestors made their home.

Attendant Added in McLean-Meem Plans

Latest flash on the forthcoming marriage of Ann Carroll Meem and Edward Beale McLean, jr.,—a flower girl has been added to the list of attendants. She is 7-year-old Leila Scott Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Henry Hill Dunn, and a second cousin of the bride-elect.

Small, blond Leila will be an attractive addition to the wedding party that will walk down an improvised aisle at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem on Wednesday, May 25. The youngest member of the nuptial party is a great granddaughter of the late Nathan B. Scott, Senator from West Virginia for many years, so she will get plenty of attention on several accounts.

Plans and parties revolving around the McLean-Meem nuptials will hold much of the social spotlight for the next few weeks. Among events already on the bride-elect's calendar are the luncheon to be given for her tomorrow by Miss Mary Bradley and the dinner-dance for her and members of her wedding party, scheduled for Monday, May 23, with Miss Stellita Stapleton as hostess.

• • • •

OF PERSONAL NOTE: Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hays Hawkins, jr., whose marriage took place here Saturday, are spending a few days at the Homestead in Hot Springs, Va., before sailing for Bermuda. Mrs. Hawkins, as most of you know, is the former Miss Laura Christine Ekengren . . . Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis are spending most of this week at Rippon Lodge, their Virginia home, the gardens of which are included in the current annual pilgrimage sponsored by the Garden Club of Virginia . . . The Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Victor Mircea Babes, who have been in New York for a brief visit, returned to Washington yesterday.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

NO LONGER will the debutante have to undergo the great mental conflict of wanting to be elected to the Junior League and yet having to choose between doing the provisional work required and getting an extra hour's sleep after a hard night. The girls are getting a new deal with the league's decision to change its season for picking candidates. Instead of choosing among the winter's crop, officers will wait until the following autumn before notifying the eligibles. This will allow the league to size up the girls more ably and the debs will be able to devote more time to study and charity work after the rush of their coming-out season is over.

Penwomen Hear Songs Of Mary Ledgerwood

Noted Contralto Presented by Mrs. Roberta Lawson at Musicale in Honor of the President, Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Federation President Hostess to Pen Women

VISITORS here attending the biennial convention of the National League of American Pen Women were entertained at a reception and musicale yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at national headquarters. Left to right are Miss Mary Ledgerwood, contralto, artist of the afternoon; Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt, national president of the league; Mrs. Lawson and Miss Marguerite Merigold, president of the D. Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

AUDREY WURDEMANN, unopposed candidate for the presidency of the National League of American Pen Women, upon her election, will be the first to hold the office whose membership in the league is based on her work as a poet. Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt, retiring president, similarly was the first composer member to be elected as head of the league.

• • • •

Pre-election gossip suggesting that Grace Boles Hedge, a past president of the San Francisco Branch of the National League of American Pen Women, might be nominated from the floor as a "dark horse" to oppose Miss Wurdemann, met with no response from Mrs. Hedge. So far as she's concerned in this election, it's third vice president or nothing, she says—and it will be third vice president, because she has no opposition for the office.

Mrs. Hedge, who is now fifth national vice president laughed when she heard there had been talk of proposing her name as a candidate for the presidency. Not only is she a friend of Miss Wurdemann's but her branch was one of the first to indorse the Pulitzer Prize poet and is one on whose votes she can count—no matter what—Mrs. Hedge declared.

Daughters of 1812 Seek to Ban 'Peace at Any Price' Films

Convention Here Also Opposes Dies Bill Giving Secretary of Labor Discretionary Power to Deport or Admit Certain Aliens.

Resolutions opposing provisions of the Dies bill, conferring on the Secretary of Labor discretionary powers in the deportation of aliens, and recommending a ban on "films being presented by radical groups which are sponsoring peace at any price," were passed yesterday by the National Society, United States Daughters of 1812. The organization, of which Mrs. Arthur J. O'Neill, of Chicago, is national president, took the action at its annual convention, attended by 300 delegates, at the Willard Hotel.

"Two very pernicious provisions" in the Dies bill were specified as those which "confer on the Secretary of Labor discretionary powers regarding deportation of aliens convicted of crime, and the second provision would allow entrance under title of hardship cases, of three-fourths of a million relatives of aliens illegally in the United States at present."

Other resolutions, presented by Mrs. Homer D. Heath, chairman of the committee, had to do with standards required of mountain schools, approved by the society and given its support.

Two daughters of 1812, who are residents of the District, were guests last night at the banquet climaxing the convention held in the Willard ballroom. They were Mrs. Clara I. Dowling and Mrs. Herbert Blandy.

Mrs. Arthur J. O'Neill, national president, presided, and speakers were Representative Sol Bloom, director of the Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission, and Maj. James J. Bingham, chaplain of the 108th Field Artillery of the Pennsylvania National Guard.

Real daughters are more numerous in the U. S. D. of 1812 than in the D. A. R. The report of Mrs. Norris Harris, of Baltimore, national registrar, yesterday showed 10 among 306 new members admitted to the society during the past year. There were also 14 junior members added to the organization.

A young prospective junior member present yesterday at the convention was Francesca Raleigh, of Conway, Ark., granddaughter of Mrs. John Weinmann, of Little Rock, one of the honorary presidents national. Mrs. Weinman and Mrs. Robert J. Johnston, another of the four honorary presidents national, are both attending the convention and were guests at the head table last night. Also seated there were other national officers here for the convention: Mrs. Minnie B. Wade, of New York, and H. B. Diffenbach, of Akron, vice presidents national; Mrs. Henry Dickson Bruns, of New Orleans, La., chaplain national; Mrs. Lloyd DeWitt Smith, Grosse Pointe, Mich., recording secretary national; Mrs. Henry Wheeler Warren, of West Hartford, Conn., historian national; Miss Katherine Wootten, of Washington, librarian national; Mrs. Norris Harris, of Baltimore, registrar national; Mrs. Maurice A. Blake, New Brunswick, N. J., treasurer national; Mrs. P. S. Tilson, Houston, Tex., curator national; Mrs. William A. Porter, Richmond, corresponding secretary national.

Mary H. Vorse Lauds Women Shoppers Here

Commends Their Interest in Conditions of Production of Goods.

There has never been a depression when there was so little violence as in that of recent years and the reason is an awakened public consciousness.

Mary Heaton Vorse, noted author and champion of labor, pointed to this fact yesterday in an address before a meeting of the Washington League of Women Shoppers at the A. A. U. W. Clubhouse. People have come to understand, she said, that a depressed group in the community affects the whole. They realize that a neglected, poverty-stricken area—an unsanitary patch on a town—eventually takes its toll from society.

Improvement of conditions will come as we understand how how closely integrated our own economic welfare is with that of the worker, said Mrs. Vorse.

She commended the League of Women Shoppers for its interest, not only in the products it buys, but in the conditions under which they are manufactured and declared such an organization was a wholesome means for working out social and economic ills.

• • • •

Mrs. Vorse, who has been reporting on labor for 25 years and is widely known as an author, has a new book, soon to be released under the title, "Labor's New Millions." Speaking yesterday on "Women and the Labor Movement," she recalled the beginning of her own interest in trade unions many years ago. Helping in a campaign to reduce infant mortality, she discovered, she said, that where the wage rates dipped below a certain level, children died; that in certain textile towns in New England, where the situation was bad, one of every five children died before reaching the age of 6. She also found, she said, that the only way to remedy conditions was for the workers themselves to organize and try to better them. Legislation follows an aroused public sentiment against abuses, she said, and such opinion, putting its weight on the side of fair dealing, makes possible an orderly correction of them.

• • • •

Only when there is a gulf between the worker and the consumer of his product and a failure to understand his problems is there likely to be violence, she said.

Mrs. Vorse did not advocate a crusade of any kind, but rather an intelligent interest of citizens in conditions in their own communities—an interest which would result in wise legislation.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Colman, president of the league, presided and introduced the speaker. Preceding the program, there was a short business session for the election of a nominating committee.

Hoover Charges Moral Decline In Government

Former President Attacks New Deal on 8 'Simple Principles.'

By the Associated Press.

Fresno, Calif., April 26.—Former President Herbert Hoover tonight appealed to politically minded women for a fight against what he termed "a moral recession" in American government.

Loss of morals in self-government paved the way for the rise of European dictatorships, said Hoover before outlining through questions "immoralities" he charged were endangering American self-government.

"They must be expurgated from American life," he told the Federation of Republican Women's Clubs.

"Government in a democracy can afford some inefficiency," said the former Chief Executive. "That is the price we pay for self-government, for intellectual and spiritual freedom. But government in a democracy cannot be immoral—that saps its very life."

Has Faith in Women.

"Somebody has to do a clean-up job in this Republic," Hoover declared in saying he was turning to women "as a complaining citizen" because "the men haven't done much of late" and because "it is . . . a commonplace fact that moral instincts of women are upon average higher than men."

"These are grave hours," said Hoover, whose address was broadcast on the Pacific Coast. "We are in a moral recession in Government.

"Beyond this we have for five years listened to a continuous defamation of everything that has gone before. Honest achievement of men has been belittled and attributed to improper motives. Ideals embedded in our patriotism are smeared with contempt. We are told that we are in ruins and we must begin anew. We are told that Government must do it for us.

"People speak less today of the greatness of America. There is doubt of her destiny."

"In a generation we raised the purchasing power of wages by 30 per cent and knocked two hours off each day," said Hoover.

Suggesting that America is enmeshed in a web of fears as much moral as economic, the former President asked "Is it not time we jerk ourselves out of this moral depression?"

Lists Eight Principles.

He listde eight "simple principles of government:"

1. The principle of clear public service requires that officials be selected on the merit system.

"Has not the patronage appointment of 300,000 officials in five years corrupted Congressmen and elections and undermined the public faith? Does it not mean a decadence in public morals?"

2. The principle of honest elections requires that Government funds must not be spent to influence the judgment and corrupt the vote of the people.

"For example," Hoover said, "does it improve national morals when the citizens see huge sums rushed to politically doubtful districts two jumps ahead of an election?"

3.—The principle of honest accounting requires that Government business be conducted with glass pockets.

"* * * is it moral for a Government to take hundreds of millions from the weekly wages of workmen under the promise they are kept in a real fund for their old age security and then spend these collections on its current expenses and extravagances?" The former President asked.

"Manipulation of budgets and obscuring the nature of Government expenditures always precede the rise of dictatorships."

4.—The principles of honor among men require that Goverment be scrupulous in its financial transactions with the citizen.

"Can a Government issue bonds carrying a promise to pay in gold and welch upon it * * * and hold the citizen to honor his transactions?" he asked.

"When the Government uses public funds to manipulate its own bond market does it differ in morals from the corporation that uses its funds to manipulate the stock market?"

Self-Reliance Urged.

5. The principle of self-reliance requires that Government expenditures build up the character of the people. . . .

"Has not every community been made into a conspiracy to get its share from the Federal grab-bag?" queried Hoover. ". . . Does that build for stamina and morals in the citizen?"

6. The principle of law enforcement and obedience to law is the first necessity of free government.

"For example, what happens to the morals of a people when the Federal officials connive at lawlessness and sit-down strikes?

"What of governors who refuse to carry out the decisions of the courts and to maintain order . . .

"Do not moral restraints disappear and the ugly specters of vigilantes take control?

"That is one of the hells into which European democracies have fallen and have burned with the fires of communism and fascism."

7. The principles of national unity require that government foster good will between all groups and sections of the people.

"Is it moral for Government officials or boards to stir up hate of group against group, such as labor unions against labor unions? . . .

"The first approach of all dictatorships is to divide the people by hate . . ."

8. The principles of truth require both moral and intellectual honesty in statements by officials.

"Can your Government broadcast half-truths and expect the citizen to tell the whole truth? . . .

"The pure food law should be extended to official publications."

Mr. Hoover said he was addressing his immediate audience not as Republican women, "but as all women concerned in the preservation of self-government."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Vindication

Senator John H. Bankhead, of Alabama, yesterday went to the Washington waterfront to see if the soybean could vindicate the faith he placed in it when he voted for soybean experiments under the Bankhead-Jones act.

And the varnish on the launch did look very sleek, indeed.

The varnish was made from the wondrous soybean, the bean that grew in China and Japan for thousands of years, that made the oil which went into the dim lamps that lighted medieval ceremonies and the bean that Americans now are using for such things as automobile steering wheels, glue, candy, oil, oilmeal, printing inks, linoleum, plastics, shortening, flour, soy sauce, infant foods, enamels, beverages and an almost endless list of other things.

A small group of agriculture scientists helped the Senator down a rickety pier and along the narrow catwalk leading to the bow of the launch, a trim craft in her own right. There, everyone except the Senator and the scientists began looking down the river, so inviting was the April day. But the Senator was out for business.

He started firing questions; he didn't look once at the fishing boats riding the brown water; he didn't listen to the small insects buzzing on the mud shores or see, apparently, a gleaming and pennanted craft lazying toward the channel. He had voted money for soybeans.

So they told him how in 1925 5,000,000 bushels of beans were harvested; in 1934 around 23,000,000 bushels and in 1937 more than 40,000,000 bushels. He asked the realistic question if the varnish experiments were panning out and was told the tests looked good; that in the 28 varnishes now undergoing exposure tests are included several different oil formulas as well as various resin formulations.

This sounded pretty technical, so the Senator, still realistic, grabbed a paint brush and a can of soybean varnish and started painting the side of the launch. He made a sufficient number of strokes to accommodate his own curiosity and a news photographer—looked at his handiwork—and in effect declared the soybean a wondrous plant, worth an appropriation anytime. Then he scuttled over the side and went back to the Congress.

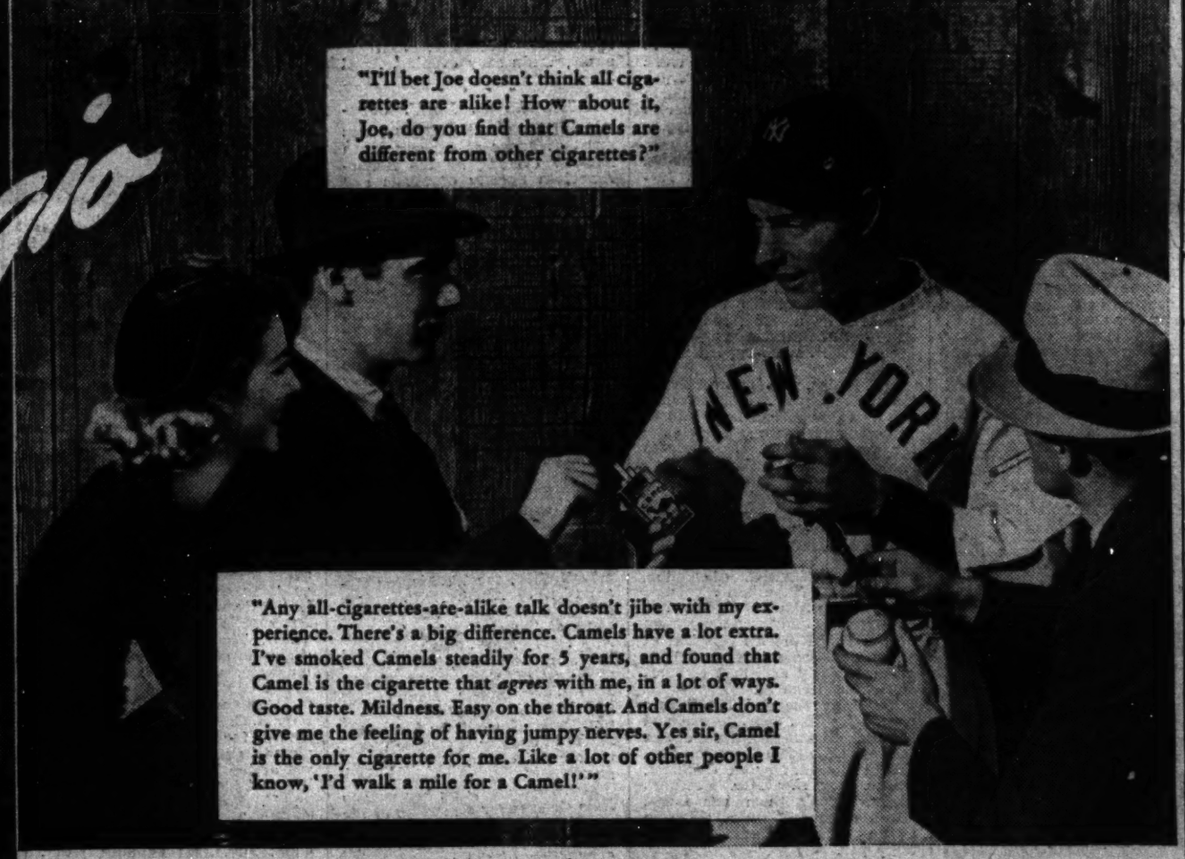
Joe DiMaggio has something to say about how different cigarettes can be!



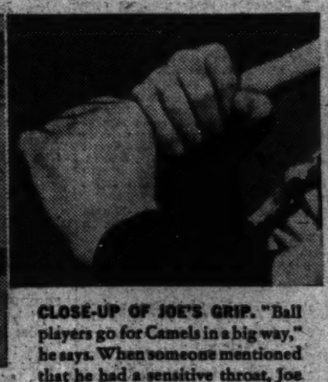
"I'll bet Joe doesn't think all cigarettes are alike! How about it, Joe, do you find that Camels are different from other cigarettes?"
"Any all-cigarettes-are-alike talk doesn't jibe with my experience. There's a big difference. Camels have a lot extra. I've smoked Camels steadily for 5 years, and found that Camel is the cigarette that agrees with me, in a lot of ways. Good taste. Mildness. Easy on the throat. And Camels don't give me the feeling of having jumpy nerves. Yes sir, Camel is the only cigarette for me. Like a lot of other people I know, 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'"
NEW YORK

WHEN BILL GRAHAM saw Joe DiMaggio pull out his package of Camels, he asked Joe's opinion on smoking. Joe came straight to the point: "There's a difference, a big difference, between Camels and the others." Like Joe DiMaggio—like millions of other Camel smokers—you, too, will find in Camels a matchless blend of finer, more expensive tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic.

JOE KEEPS his hand in on mending nets. His family are fisher folk from away back. DiMaggio is 6 feet tall—weighs around 185 pounds. His nerves are h-e-a-l-t-h-y!

DURING THE WINTER, Joe's busy at his restaurant. Ask Joe what he does when tired—"I get a 'lift' with a Camel—another reason I say Camels are the cigarette for me. They set me right!"

BACK IN THE KITCHEN of his picturesque water front restaurant, Joe says: "I eat pretty much what I like all season long and smoke Camels with my meals and afterward—'for digestion's sake.' I think Camels are just made to order for mealtime contentment."



CLOSE-UP OF JOE'S GRIP. "Ball players go for Camels in a big way," he says. When someone mentioned that he had a sensitive throat, Joe remarked: "I'm a steady smoker and I find that Camels don't irritate my throat. That shows Camels have real mildness all right."

"TOBACCO GROWERS FAVOR CAMELS FOR THEIR SMOKING!"
—is the majority opinion in a survey of well-known tobacco planters

"When Camel says 'costlier tobaccos' I know it's right," says Mr. Edward Estes, capable young planter. "Camel bought all the best parts of my last crop—paid me the most I've ever gotten. The men who grow tobacco know what to smoke—Camels!"

"Last year I had the dandiest crop ever," says Mr. Roy Jones, another experienced planter who prefers Camels. "I smoke Camels because they pay more at the auctions for the choice lots of leaf tobacco. They paid the highest price I ever got from anybody. It's not surprising that Camel is the leading cigarette with us planters."

Mr. Harold Craig knows the kinds of tobaccos that go into various cigarettes. "I'm the fellow who gets the check—so I know that Camels use more expensive tobaccos. Camel got the best of my last crop. That holds true with most planters I know too. You bet I smoke Camels."

Last year, Mr. Walter Devine's tobacco brought the highest price in his market. "Camel paid top prices for my best lots," he says, telling what happened at the auction. "Other planters got top prices from the Camel buyers too when their tobacco was extra-choice grade. Being in the tobacco growing business, I'm partial to Camels. Most of the other big growers here feel the same way."

Top prices, that's what J. B. Jackson, another successful planter, got from the Camel buyer last year. "Camel buyers don't buy just any tobaccos—they pay more to get the best. That means finer tobaccos are used for Camels. I say cigarette quality has got to be grown in the tobacco. That's why I smoke Camels."

HENRY SEES THE PRESIDENT.

(An imaginary conversation between Mr. Roosevelt and Henry Ford, the Sage of Detroit. Just an exchange of pleasantries.)

FORD: Hello, Frank, I mean Mr. President . . . Hee, hee, haw! I heard some good jokes on you on the train coming down!

FDR: You don't say! Nobody ever tells me any of those White House stories.

(Writes a memo: "Steve Early: What are the latest Roosevelt jokes?")

What stories did you hear, Henry?

FORD: Er——I forget; can't remember jokes.

* * * *

FDR: I'm glad your buddies are making jokes. I thought they were too frightened to make jokes.

Henry Ford . . . try honey?

FORD: How do you mean my buddies? They don't like me any more than they like you!

FDR: You still think of yourself as a garage mechanic, don't you Henry?

* * * *

FORD: Don't let the Roosevelt jokes bother you, Mr. President. I built up my business on Ford jokes.

FDR: I hear you used to pay $10 for every new Ford joke.

FORD: Yes, yours come a little higher.

"—take Girdler for a cruise"

FDR: The Roosevelt jokes don't bother me; I wish someone would tell 'em to me. Most of the people who come in here have the fidgets.

FORD: I'll tell you the latest Roosevelt joke . . . They say you want us to raise wages and lower prices, ha, ha, ha!

FDR: Ha, ha, ha! That's a good one, isn't it? Guarantee your men $1,500 a year and don't try to oversell the car market . . . Get the idea?

* * * *

FORD: I get what you mean, Mr. President. (Ha, ha, ha!) But some of the others haven't got as good a sense of humor as I have. You know, I tried part of that, before you were even Governor.

FDR: How about all this fear I hear about—are the folks in Detroit afraid?

FORD: Afraid? Some of 'em swoon every time they pick up the paper.

* * * *

FDR: Well, some of your neighbors used to think even Arthur Vandenberg was kinda radical . . . Just naturally nervous.

FORD: I remember when I was trying to put my first automobile together. I'd prime it and prime it and still it wouldn't run.

FDR: Yes, I used to have that trouble with some of your later cars, too. Long time ago, though.

* * * *

FORD: Thanks, Mr. President . . . Seems to be the same way with the country now.

F.D.R. I don't see what they've got to be afraid of . . . Even the congressmen I helped elect aren't afraid of me anymore.

* * * *

FDR: Maybe we'll find out one of these days who elected who.

FORD: Atta old fight, Mr. President . . . Do you know, I envy your personality sometimes . . . Did you ever think of using some of your charm on the boys who're kinda cold to you?

FDR: What do you mean? Might as well try to melt an iceberg with a candle.

"—from oats to hydroelectricity"

FORD: Well, I'm not so sure. Some of those plutocrats are pushovers for charm.

FDR: Yes, I remember the time you gave a new Ford to a chap who passed himself off on you as Baron von Krupp. Charming chap, I've heard.

FORD: There you go, always razzing . . . What I mean is, why don't you take Ernest Weir and Bob McCormick and Al Smith and Tom Girdler and J. P. Morgan and a couple of Rockefellers and Frank Knox out on your cruise with you this week-end and try to sell 'em on the More Abundant Life. By golly, I think you could do it.

* * * *

FDR: It sounds romantic to me . . . They'd think I was taking 'em to a concentration camp.

FORD: My grandmother always told me you could catch more flies with honey than with vinegar . . . They think you don't like 'em.

FDR: I wonder where they got that idea . . . Why, they'd jump overboard after listening to my first consultation.

* * * *

FORD: Well, it isn't easy converting a country from oats to hydroelectricity . . . Back in the horse-and-buggy days many was the time a fast sulky passed my horseless carriage on the road.

FDR: I wonder how some of my rich friends would like to trade their 16-cylinder cars—beg pardon, Henry—in on a barouche and a pair of bay mares.

FORD: Well, gotta be going . . . Don't waste all your personality on the reliefers, Frank.

FDR: Maybe you'd better pick up a couple of captains of industry for your collection of early Americana—while you can still find some.

Hearing Due This Week on Trade Code

Smith Introduces Bill of Greater Scope Than Palmisano's.

Fine of $500 Proposed for Merchants Who Sell Under Cost.

A hearing was promised this week by Chairman McGehee, of the judiciary sub-committee of the House District Committee, yesterday on two fair trade practice bills for Washington after introduction of the second by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia. The hearing may be held tomorrow or Friday.

Smith's bill would cover all goods, whether trade-marked or not, whereas the measure sponsored by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, is restricted to registered products.

A fine of up to $500 in provided in Smith's bill, which would prohibit all retailers for selling goods below cost.

A half-dozen exemptions are set forth, however, in the Smith bill. They included bona fide clearance sales, fresh fruits, vegetables and farm products; imperfect, damaged or discontinued goods; merchandise sold for charitable purposes or to relief agencies; goods sold to the Government; merchandise sold upon final liquidation of business, and goods sold "to meet lawful competition."

Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, yesterday introduced two bills sent up by the Commissioners.

One provides for an additional Police Court judge, while the second would authorize the Board of Education to employ research assistants in the public schools to replace teachers now doing that type of work.

50 Seek Positions With Relief Survey

More than 50 persons have applied for positions with the newly appointed District relief investigator, Burdette J. Lewis, it was disclosed yesterday.

Lewis, now with the National Resources Committee, was appointed to head the investigation Monday.

Congress appropriated $10,000 for the survey, requesting a report before August 1. On the basis of $35 a day for Lewis, approximately $7,000 would remain for additional help and expenses. Lewis will meet District Commissioners and other officials Friday to plan the survey. All appointments to jobs will be made by Lewis, it was announced.

Removal Ordered For Conduit Loop

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday authorized the Capital Transit Co. to abandon and remove the conduit track loop and special work connections in and north of Benning road east of Bladensburg road.

The commission directed the company to construct a tangent track in Benning road and to install a surface track crossover in Benning road between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, northeast and make grade adjustment to the eastbound track.

Officials explained that acquisition of land for the extension of Maryland avenue east of Fifteenth street northeast, necessitated the removal of the loop.

Man Asks $35,000 For a Broken Leg

Damages of $35,000 were demanded of Robert L. Rawe, 3025 Connecticut avenue northwest, in District Court yesterday when William A. Shytle, 4423 Third street northwest, an American Express Co. employe, alleged he had been struck at H street and Connecticut avenue northwest.

Shytle, through Attorney Dorsey K. Offutt, said he suffered a broken leg in the accident and had remained on the street for 45 minutes before an ambulance arrived. A policeman would not permit his removal, the suit stated, because of the nature of the break.

Cardozo, Better, Now In N. Y. for Summer

Associate Supreme Court Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, stricken last December with shingles and a heart ailment, will spend the summer at the Port Chester (N. Y.) estate of Judge Irving Lehman, of the New York State Court of Appeals.

Cardozo already has departed, a fact which associates said indicated that his recovery has extended beyond earlier expectations. Cardozo was a legal associate of Lehman before his appointment to the Nation's highest tribunal.

450 District Advertising Folk Lay Cares Aside for Jamboree

Artists, Copy-Writers, Representatives of Radio, Magazines, Newspapers, Frolic in Celebration of Club's 20th Anniversary at the Shoreham.

In the blue and golden ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, some 450 creators of Washington advertising met last night for an evening of merrymaking.

The occasion was the annual jamboree of the Washington Advertising Club. At the same time, the affair marked the organization's twentieth anniversary.

The men and women present at the jamboree made a composite picture of advertising in America. There were representatives of the agencies, of the advertising departments of retail stores and of the advertising branches of newspapers and radio. Then, too, there were the commercial artists and photographers whose work illustrates the ads that you see in the paper. Every phase of the profession was represented.

But gone last night were all worries about layouts, illustrations and copy themes. The admen were enjoying themselves—and they went about it with as little fuss and formality as possible.

One of the highlights of the evening was the appearance of Allan Jones, singing star of the motion pictures, and his wife, Irene Hervey. Jones sang several numbers.

Later on, Meyer Davis walked in and took the baton from Dave McWilliams, who had been directing Davis' orchestra.

Most hilarious event of the evening was the presentation of awards to lucky ticket holders. This went on to the accompaniment of cheers, foot-stamping and the popping of balloons while a spotlight played on the winners as they came up to receive prizes from Assistant Corporation Counsel Jo V. Morgan and Master of Ceremonies Larry Elliott, WJSV announcer.

The first three prizes were won by Mrs. Sally Muchmore, Mrs. Al Merrill and Mrs. F. G. Christel. Other winners were Walter C. Coates and James Hardey, jr., Mrs. Eleanor Lee, Milton Abramson, Peggy Kearney, W. R. Harvey, Elizabeth Odell, Mrs. Gordon Hayes, Mrs. Walter Royal, Mrs. Jules James, Mrs. Fred P. Gushrie, Sol Goldstein, C. M. Scates, G. C. Brant, jr., Sol Goldstein, Mrs. J. A. Walter.

There were no speeches at the jamboree but President Wilmot R. Squier presented the chairman Alvin Q. Ehrlich, and congratulated him on his success in organizing the evening. Squier was introduced as the youngest president of any major advertising club.

100-Foot Parking Prohibition Tabled By Commissioners

The District Commissioners yesterday "tabled for further consideration" a regulation prohibiting parking within 100 feet of an intersection controlled by traffic lights.

After a two-hour conference with Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown, the Commissioners decided to "lay aside" this regulation, but approve another. This regulation, which will go into effect ten days after publication, prohibits parking of cars closer than 20 feet back of the building line at intersections of streets.

Attached to this order is a proviso that parking will not be prohibited for more than 50 feet back of the intersection of curb lines.

The regulation which would have banned parking within 100 feet from intersections controlled by traffic lights will be considered further by the Commissioners with a view toward approving a "revised form."

Refusal to Give Racial Equality To Japan Blamed for War Spirit

British Peace Advocate Says Present War Is Result.

Refusal of Occidental nations to accord "racial equality" to Japan is responsible for Japanese aggression in China, Miss Muriel Lester, of Kingsley Hall, London, said last night at a dinner given for her at Wesley Hall by the National Council for Prevention of War. The "Jane Addams of London" had just returned from a trip of several months to China and Japan on an embassy of reconciliation.

"It was a black day for the Orient," she said, "when the white statesmen at Versailles after the war decided to refuse the request for racial equality put forward by Japanese representatives. When the news was telegraphed to Tokyo, liberals were immediately discredited and militarists seated firmly in the saddle. We may as well face the fact that our personal indulgence in race prejudice is contributing today to the agony of China."

Miss Lester found "completely humorous" the "spectacle of British and Americans handing to the Japanese as much gas, cotton and army equipment as they want and then condemning them for using the same."

"Today," she said, "Japan gets the hate and the blame of the world and we get the profits. Let us get integrity back. It alone furnishes the power to right any wrong."

MISS MURIEL LESTER.

Clinics to Test 1,000 Starting School in Fall

Examinations to Start Today at 3 D. C. Buildings.

P.-T. A. Is Sponsoring Health Program; Physicians, Dentists Aiding.

More than 1,000 pre-school children will troop to their future alma maters between today and May 16 for the twelfth mass health examination conducted by the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The goal of the health campaign, which centers around Child Health Day, May 1, is a 100 per cent healthy group of first graders when school starts in the fall. Physicians, nurses, dentists and oculists will greet the youngsters at school buildings. A record will be made of all physical defects and sent home to the prospective pupil's parents.

Then, next fall, the child will take to school with him a certificate from his family doctor showing that the defects have been corrected. The reward for dilligence will be a blue ribbon, indicating physical perfection.

The three schools which will launch the "summer roundup" today are H. D. Cooke, Seventeenth and Euclid streets northwest; Shepherd, Kalmia and Fourteenth streets northwest, and Orr, Twenty-second and Prout streets southeast.

Last year 950 children took advantage of the free examinations and increased interest in the 1938 campaign indicates that even more will do so this year, according to Mrs. Edward R. Seal, of the District P.-T. A.

The project which is carried on at the same time in all parts of the country, has been given the endorsement and the co-operation of the District Medical Society, the District Dental Society, the Board of Education, the District Health Department, the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society and the District Tuberculosis Association.

Private physicians have volunteered to give their time and services for the drive.

Schools holding examinations tomorrow are Barnard, Blair and Thomson; Friday, Barnard, Hayes, Brookland, Kenilworth, Park View, Petworth and Woodridge; Saturday, Binker Hill and Fillmore; Monday, May 2, Burroughs, Emery, Gage, Janney, Stanton, Stoddart and Wheatley.

Wednesday, May 4, Blow; May 5, Francis Scott Key; May 9, Edmonds and Hubbard; May 10, Congress Heights, Powell Elementary and Whittier; May 11, Madison; May 12, Hubbard and Fairbrother; May 13, Addison; May 16, Kingsman.

Catholic Students Set Own Peace Day

More than 1,000 students will participate in the first Catholic Student Peace Day demonstration on the Georgetown University campus at 8 tonight as a part of a nation-wide move to counteract observances of the American Student Union, with which Catholic students have refused to affiliate. Similar demonstrations will be conducted in about 15 Catholic institutions.

E. James Hickey, president of the Students Council, will preside tonight. The papal charter for peace will be read by Walter B. Connolly and John W. Nurre, senior president and perfect of the Sodality, will speak on "The Catholic Meaning of Peace."

The exercises close with a benediction. The Rev. James T. Sweeney, S. J., vice provincial of the Maryland-New York province of the Society of Jesus, will be celebrant; the Rev. Ferdinand Schoberg, S. J., deacon; the Rev. Leo G. Monahan, S. J., sub-deacon, and William H. Prendergast, a senior student, master of ceremonies.

The day opens officially with a mass in Dahlgren Chapel at 7:30 a. m. in celebration of world peace.

Women Voters Air Executive Reform

St. Louis, April 26 (AP).—A drastically reorganized executive branch was recommended to the National League of Women Voters today as an immediate objective for those concerned with American government.

"The recent defeat of the reorganization bill left many important questions unanswered," declared John M. Gaus, professor of government at the University of Wisconsin. "There is no profit in berating Presidents or Congressmen. What we need is a job analysis."

Tipsy Knife Wielder Given 165-Day Term

An 8-inch knife, with which Norman R. Case, of 3117 M street northwest, allegedly told police he was going "to cut up his brother" was used in Police Court yesterday to send Case to jail for 165 days. Case was arrested on Wisconsin avenue Monday night for intoxication, and when police discovered the knife on his person that placed a concealed-weapon charge against him as well. Judge John P. McMahon sentenced him to 120 days for carrying the concealed weapon and 45 days for intoxication.

Church 'Indifferent to Crime,' Sparkman Tells Bible Group

Representative Sees Challenge in Providing Opportunities for Youth; 200 Attend Hamline Class Annual Dinner.

"There is a great challenge confronting us Christian laymen in carrying out the program laid down by Jesus Christ," Representative John Sparkman (Democrat), Alabama, told 200 diners last night at the second annual banquet of the men's bible class of Hamline M. E. Church, in the church parish hall.

"I think we have allowed ourselves to grow indifferent to crime and to the things that breed crime, particularly among youth," he said. "There is a serious problem confronting the Christian church in providing youth with the opportunities so greatly and naturally craves."

Praising the class for co-operation shown in the past year, the class president, Frank Smith, said "you should be proud to be a part of that great Christian army of 5,000,000 men who every Sunday morning across this Nation meet in bible class sessions. You are doing a great and noble task."

Dr. H. W. Burgan, pastor of Hamline Church, said "despite the pessimism abroad in the land, I see a hopeful sign in that religion is on the increase. The golden period of man's life is ahead of him."

Other speakers were Edwin S. Swingle, class teacher; Wilmer F. Stickle, chairman of the banquet committee, and Dr. Chesteen Smith, former pastor, now finance committee chairman of the Federation of Churches.

Women of the church prepared and served the dinner. Toastmaster was Theodore "Ted" Lewis. Song leader was W. R. Schmucker.

Immediately after the banquet, Representative Sparkman hurried to Union Station to board a train for the South. He is a lay delegate from the North Alabama Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, to general conference of the Methodist Church opening tomorrow at Birmingham.

Fire Lieut. Barber Is Made a Captain

Lieut. F. E. Barber, of the District Fire Department, yesterday was promoted to Captain of No. 3 Engine Company, to fill the vacancy made by the recent promotion of Capt. F. M. Edwards to battalion chief. The new captain takes his post today.

Cited for his heroic work in connection with the Knickerbocker disaster, Barber has been with the department more than 20 years.

Other promotions included Sergt. F. D. Scroggins to Lieutenant of No. 14 Truck Company and Pvt. M. L. Thompson to Sergeant at No. 26 Engine. Scroggins was cited for his heroic action in the Hahn Shoe store blaze.

District Will Seek Better PWA Terms

A committee of three District officials has been directed to study PWA loans in the hope of obtaining better terms in the future, it was announced yesterday.

The three named by the District Commissioners were Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, assistant Engineer Commissioner, chairman; District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan and Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal.

It was pointed out that States are allowed better terms than the District on Federal loans. In addition, the District has received grants of only 30 per cent on its projects, whereas cities in other jurisdictions have received grants amounting to 45 per cent of the total cost of projects.

Parking Men Fight Public Lots, Blame Prices on High Rentals

Eleven District parking lot operators, representing, they said, a majority of the parking lot space in the District, met last night to map plans for fighting a bill to provide municipally operated parking lots here, sponsored by Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), Illinois.

The parking operators claimed that its proposal to establish parking space for cars at 10 cents per day, would leave a deficit to be made up by the taxpayers. They said the lots could not be operated for this charge, adding that the burden of the deficit would be shared by car owners and those without cars.

Under the Dirksen plan 12 lots would be established in downtown Washington. A committee appointed by the District Commissioners, has been studying the proposal.

One of the parking operators at last night's meeting, held in the Hamilton Hotel, said "we are doing a good job at a fair price," and in addition relieving traffic congestion by removing cars from the streets. They attributed parking prices to high rents which, they claimed, are frequently 50 per cent to 200 per cent above the rent which would be charged for the same lot with a building on it.

The group last night completed formation of the Associated Parking Station Operators of the District. Officers are C. J. B. Murphy, president and secretary; Edward R. Altman, vice president, and W. H. Poole, jr., treasurer.

Seal Reveals That Hit-and-Run Charge Will Be Dropped.

Evidence to Convict Is Lacking, Court Will Be Advised.

A charge of hit-run driving against Representative Claude V. Parsons (Democrat), Illinois, will be dropped today after three months of delay in bringing it to trial, Elwood Seal, corporation counsel, said last night.

Although Seal declined to enlarge on his statement, it was understood the court will be told that a review of facts in the case convinced prosecutors they held insufficient evidence to obtain a conviction. The case will be definitely closed by Seal's action.

Parsons was accused of leaving after colliding with an automobile driven by Albert D. Nesbitt, Cleveland lawyer, at Connecticut avenue and Calvert street northwest the night of February 22. He claimed the charge was a frame-up.

Nearly a dozen witnesses at a hearing in Seal's office described the crash and told how Parsons' car was pursued through Rock Creek Park at speeds varying between 40 and 50 miles an hour. Parsons said he intended reporting the incident to police later, that he was covered by insurance and that he was fearful of the pursuers.

Girl Reported Injured.

Nesbitt was held on a charge of pulling away from the curb without giving the proper hand signal. No mention was made last night of the disposition of charges against Parsons' accuser.

The case originally was reported to police by Miss Margaret Ellis, of 2603 Connecticut avenue, who said she was thrown to the pavement and her leg injured when the driver of the car which struck Nesbitt's closed the door violently when she attempted to obtain his name. She said the other driver got out of his car after the collision, surveyed the damage and drove off. Since the car bore out-of-town license plates, she said, she determined to give chase.

Parsons Feared Brawl.

Parsons said he declined to halt after the collision when he was followed by Nesbitt's car because he feared its occupants intended to do him harm.

"They had been hounding me all the way up the street," he said. "I assumed they were trying to force me into another accident. I kept on going because I wasn't going to let anyone engage me in a brawl on the street."

With Parsons at the time of the collision were three women, one of whose name he refused to give prosecutors, because she could not be present at the hearing and her testimony was "unimportant."

Powell Supported For Bishop's Post

Alabama Episcopalians, assembling at Carlowville, Ala., to select a new bishop, apparently had placed their major support behind the Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul here, the Associated Press reported last night.

Whoever is chosen for the high office will succeed the late Bishop W. G. McDowell. Besides Dr. Powell, six other clergymen are being considered for the post, it was announced.

A native of Lowndesboro, Ala., and a graduate of Auburn University, Dr. Powell last night refused to comment on his possible selection.

G. W. Trustees Weigh New Medical Building

A new medical school building and hospital is under consideration by trustees of George Washington University, with sale of present facilities contemplated to finance the project, it was learned yesterday.

Dr. Earl B. McKinley, dean of the medical school, said the new structures would be located near the university campus at Twentieth and G streets northwest. The present school and hospital are in the 1300 block of H street northwest.

16 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

I guess booing is the unalienable right of American baseball fans — like second guessing and getting righteously indignant over a club owner's refusal to pay Outfielder Joe Drizzlepuss a cent more than $20,000 a year. But that was nevertheless a strange demonstration by Washington fans the other day when Rookie George Case heard the call of the wild.

POVICH.

In the first place, Case was wearing a uniform of the Nats, and that fact elicits the chief surprise that he was booed. Washington fans have never directed their vocal razzberries at Washington players — particularly so early in the season. The booing of Case apparently has broader aspects.

Dismissing for the moment the justification for the boos—or the lack of it—the demonstration appears to have its broader aspects. Washington fandom undoubtedly is undergoing a change. No individual is sacred any more. The thing that is paramount is winning that ball game.

• • • •

Clark Griffith, who owns the Nats, can take that booing as a healthy sign. It means an upswing in baseball interest in Washington. It means that the fans are interested in his ball team, else they wouldn't be there in the first place to boo. And fan interest means a tilt in the gate receipts.

The booing of Case lent a touch of Brooklyn to Griffith Stadium the other day. And the Nats' ownership has nothing to fear from that, financially. For Brooklyn, chief home of the Bronx huzzah which is showered without favor on home-town or visiting players alike, is the hottest baseball town in either league, as evidenced by three straight sell-outs last week-end despite the fact that the Dodgers lost all three games.

But, as we were saying, the Case incident, was a bit startling. Not in the memory of this department, has a Washington player been booed in the last 10 years. When Bucky Harris was ending his first term as the Nats' manager in '28, the grandstand wolves were at his neck, but Harris was a manager and deemed a proper object of boos.

• • • •

It wasn't a very laudable thing, that demonstration against Case. The rookie is admittedly in the stages of development as an outfielder after breaking into organized baseball as a pitcher. And he erred on the play that is most difficult for a young outfielder—going far back for a ball. The lad goes to his right or left and can race with ease or facility, but he has not yet learned the knack of breaking toward the rear.

• • • •

Case, in fact, is on the spot as long as he attempts to play centerfield for the Nats. Because Mel Almada has spoiled Washington fans. The fleet Mexican, who almost daily thrills the customers with his long-distance runs and spectacular catches, has made it tough on any fellow who attempts to succeed him in the job, just as Ossie Bluege for many years inured Washington fans to 100 per cent performance at third base.

In that connection, Buddy Lewis was no dashing star late in 1936 when he succeeded Bluege at third base for the Nats. The customers sighed for the return of Ossie after getting a gander at the rookie Lewis. But if anybody is fated to make Washington fans forget Bluege and his feats at third base it is this same Lewis who has now blossomed as the finest third baseman in either league.

• • • •

Speaking of booing, as we seem to be, the fellow who probably elicited more razzberries from Washington fans than any other individual was George Herman Ruth. But the booing of Ruth was never vicious. It was always a friendly sort of boo—a gentle dig at the great man. Because the fans were not only willing but eager to follow those boos with their cheers if Ruth would do them the favor of hitting one of his home runs.

The vicious boos are such as those that last summer were reserved for Jake Powell, the former Nat who returned to Griffith Stadium as a member of the Yankees, and proceeded to wreck the Washington infield with his wild-horse base running.

The booing of Case was neither vicious nor in fun. It was an indignant demonstration against a rookie who was endangering Washington's chances of finishing up in the league race. That means only one thing. Washington Fandom this season cannot be accused of being apathetic. They are taking an interest in this Washington ball team.

Cubs Smash Buc Streak, Win by 5-3

Pittsburgh Loses First Game of Season in 10 Innings.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 26.—The Pittsburgh Pirates bowed today for the first time in the young National League season, but it took the hard-clubbing Chicago Cubs ten innings to grind out their 5-to-3 triumph.

The Cubs crammed two triples and a single into their half of the extra chapter to account for their margin of two runs after the Pirates had played tag all the way through the early frames.

It was the first defeat since September 23, 1937, for Pittsburgh, which copped ten consecutive games at the end of last season and seven more this year.

The Cubs scored a run in the first inning and another in the second, driving Southpaw Ed Brandt to cover. He was relieved by Bill Swift, a righthander, who matched slants satisfactorily with Tex Carleton until the tenth.

Then Billy Herman and Jim Collins led off with triples and Joe Marty singled just to make the margin conclusive.

Tony Lazzeri, subbing for Bill Jurges at shortstop, hit his second home run in as many days in the sixth to give Chicago a one-run lead after the Pirates had tied the score at two-all in the fifth. Like yesterday's drive, the ball cleared the leftfield fence 365 feet from home plate.

Carleton, in going the route, scattered eight hits. The Pirates nicked him for single runs in the first, fifth and sixth.

Johnny Rizzo, the slugging rookie, who has figured importantly in Pirate victories, struck out twice today with what might have been the winning run on base. In the ninth with Swift on second base, Carleton intentionally passed Paul Waner in order to pitch to, and fan, Rizzo.

Cincinnati Beats Cardinals by 8 to 7

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, April 26.—Blanked for six innings, Cincinnati overcame a seven-run disadvantage today and with rallies in three frames nosed out the St. Louis Cards, 8 to 7, in an overtime game to take fifth place in the National League.

It was the fourth straight defeat for Frankie Frisch's crew, three of them shutouts.

Curt Davis, making his first start in a Card uniform since acquisition from Chicago, homered with three mates aboard in the fourth—when the visitors accumulated five runs on two hits, fielder's choice and a walk—but it was not enough to keep him in the game. In all, the tail-end Cards used five hurlers who yielded a total of 16 hits.

Lew Riggs' single in the tenth with the sacks loaded on Myers' single and walks to Lonnie Frey and Ival Goodman, broke up the game, which was witnessed by 2,386 paid customers.

Dodgers Beaten By Boston Bees, 4-1

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 26.—Big Jim Turner, who won 20 games last year for the Boston Bees, took another stride toward equaling that mark today when he turned in a five-hit performance that stopped the Brooklyn Dodgers, 4 to 1. It was the Boston right-hander's second triumph of the young season.

Until the eighth he had a three-hit shutout in his grasp. Then Woody English drew a walk and, with two out, Pinch Hitter Gibby Brack belted a triple to right center to score English with the only Brooklyn run. Buddy Hassett, another pinch hitter, opened the ninth with a single, but Turner made Manush hit into a double play and retired Camilli on a grounder.

Singles by Cuccinello, Gilbert English, DiMaggio and Warstler, all off Forest Pressnell, gave Boston three runs in the fourth, enough to win. They got their last in the sixth without a hit—on a walk, a hit batsman, a sacrifice on which all hands were safe, and a force play.

Homers Help Giants Win Loose Game

7-Run Bombardment in Late Innings Beats Philadelphia, 12-8.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—A seven-run bombardment in the last two innings gave the New York Giants a 12 to 8 decision over the Phillies in a loosely played ball game today that saw both starting pitchers shelled off the mound.

MEL OTT.

Manager Bill Terry had planned to start Carl Hubbell, but the Hub reported with a slight case of the grippe and Terry switched to Hy Vandenberg. The rookie right-hander was knocked out in the fourth, when the Phils took a 4-3 lead with three runs, and was followed by Walter Brown and Dick Coffman. Coffman got credit for the victory.

Home runs by Jim Ripple in the seventh, with one man on, and by Mel Ott in the eighth, with two on base, featured the winning rallies. Ripple's four-bagger was his second of the season and Ott's his third. They brought the Giant production to ten four-baggers in seven games.

Coffman, after being nicked for two runs in the ninth, retired Pinchhitter Jack Clark on a fly with two out and the bases loaded.

Indians Trounce Chisox, 10-6; Rout Cain in Delayed Slugfest

Clevelanders Win Sixth Victory With 18-Hit Barrage in the Concluding Innings.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 26.—Wiping out three early Chicago leads, Cleveland's first-place Indians batted out a 10-to-6 victory over the Chicago White Sox in the delayed opener of the series here today for their sixth straight triumph.

Shut out for four frames by Sugar Cain, the Indians concentrated 15 of their 18 hits in the last five frames to rout Cain and tie the score at 5-5 in the seventh. Then they pounded Rookie Bill Cox for the winning runs in the eighth and polished off the day with two more off John Rigney in the ninth.

Earl Whitehill was the winning pitcher, although Dennis Galehouse had to rescue him in the eighth.

Mike Kreevich, with a homer, and Gerald Walker, with a triple, double and single, featured the Sox's 10-hit attack.

A trio of singles by Trosky, Frank Pytlak and Whitehill in the fifth erased the first Chicago lead after Kreevich's homer in the first and Lyn Lary's throwing error that followed a single by Jack Hayes and a pass in the second put the Sox ahead, 2 to 0.

Three consecutive doubles by Averill, Trosky and Ken Keltner in the sixth tied it up again after the Sox took a second lead of 4-2 when Walker doubled, eluded a run-down on Marv Owen's fielder's choice and Luke Sewell's single. Then when Walker's triple, cashing a pass to Kreevich, put the Sox out in front again, 5-4, in their seventh, Cleveland came back to tie it once more as Averill singled home Julius Solters, who doubled.

Roosevelt Beats Central, 12-4; Eastern Downs W. & L., 16-1

Redinger Is Steady; Allows Only 5 Hits

Bethesda and Terp Frosh Play 5-to-5 Tie; Montgomery Blair Beats Western, 4 to 3; Wilson Swamps Little Hoyas, 26 to 2.

Behind the steady pitching of Jack Redinger, who allowed but five hits while his teammates were slugging vigorously, Roosevelt High School's unpredictable nine won a 12-to-4 victory over Central yesterday at Roosevelt stadium.

A small crowd watched Redinger settle down after giving up two runs in both the second and third innings. Starting in the fourth frame he retired ten Central batters in order and would have set 15 down if it had not been for an error by Billy Robertson on Clark's ground ball.

Dizzy De Zerne, Central's hurler, started well and looked as if he had too much on the ball for the Riders. He pitched two scoreless innings, but beginning with the third the slim right-hander began to weaken and had a terrible time getting anybody out in the fourth, fifth and seventh frames.

Central, making its Inter-High debut, was the first to reach the scoring column in a loosely played game that saw 10 errors, two passed balls, and two wild pitches. Two errors, a single by Benny Steiner, and two infield outs gave the Mount Pleasant team its last two runs in the third, after a single by T. DiBlasi, a double by Clark, and an error had given the Ray-coached team two runs in the second.

With this 4-0 lead staring them in the face, Roosevelt began to work in earnest in the third. A single by Perlo, who had three for three to take the batting honors for the day, a single by Redinger, a walk to Gray, and an infield error on Thrift's ground ball gave the Rough Riders its first two runs.

Behind the heavy slugging of Slyvan Stein and Dick Smith, who slammed out consecutive doubles, and Hymie Perlo, Coach Herman Littman's charges drove across three runs in the fourth and three in the fifth to clinch the decision.

But to embarrass the Central crew just a little more, they had beaten Roosevelt twice in practice games, the Rough Riders jumped on the weak Dizzy DeZerne and upped the score with four more tallies. Again the stick work of Smith and Perlo caused the damage in this seventh inning uprising.

Eastern Nine Trims
Washington-Lee, 16-1

Rip Carver, ace hurler for Chief Guyon's charges, put an abrupt halt to Washington-Lee's seven-game winning streak yesterday at Eastern Stadium. When young Carver left the mound in the seventh inning, he had to his credit eight strike-outs, had allowed one run, given up two hits and was the proud winner of a 16-1 victory.

Eastern used about everybody in the school in gaining revenge over a team that had beaten them, 10-7, in the first meeting between the two schools. Jacobs, Kidwell and Carver slammed out home runs to lead the Lincoln Parkers' attack during the big first and fourth innings.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Ties With Maryland

With Morrell pitching his first game of the season, Bethesda-Chevy Chase surprised by holding the University of Maryland Frosh Nine to a 5-5 draw on the field at College Park yesterday. Even though Morrell allowed nine hits, he was good enough to hold the Frosh scoreless in the last three frames.

The game, which was to have been a seven-inning affair, went into the ninth, but after no score could be shoved across by either team, was called on account of darkness. S. Mizell and Fuller were the hitting stars for Bethesda, while Gordon led the Freshman attack.

Montgomery-Blair Defeats Western, 4-3

Montgomery-Blair marched right into the backyard of Western yesterday and after a full game of exciting baseball, marched right back out to Silver Springs with a 4-3 victory tucked under its belt.

Behind the hitting of Sills and Orrison, the Blair boys scored two runs in the first frame. They added one in the third and one in the sixth, which, as things turned out, was enough to win the game. Lynham and Needle were Western's batting stars making half of their team's hits.

Wilson Nine Trims Georgetown Prep, 26-2

Wilson's baseball warriors slammed out 21 hits while Byer was doing a nice bit of hurling to run roughshod over Georgetown Prep, 26-2, yesterday on the prep boys' home field.

This walloping served as a warning to interhigh contenders that Wilson will be in stride when they resume high school competition. Three home runs featured the tilt, with Fugler, Stevens and Barbee knocking out four-baggers that added greatly to the score. Wilson scored in every inning of the game.

Buddy Myer Gets Caught Off Base

Buddy Myer, Nats' infielder, wandered too far off base in the second inning yesterday and gets caught between second and third bases with Red Sox in front of him and Red Sox in back of him. Pursuing Myer (No. 1) is Boston's third baseman, Higgins (No. 5). Boston bulwarks guarding second base are Joe Cronin, shortstop (top), and the second baseman, Doerr.

Local Youth On Mat Card

The first local boy to make good in wrestling since Joe Turner took a hitch in his pants and clamped a half Nelson on John Kolonis will make his home-town debut at the Arena tomorrow night when Dick Craddock matches holds with Al Norcus. They will appear in a 30-minute preliminary on the Jacobs-Sanooke program.

Born and reared in Washington, but currently receiving his mail at Alexandria, Craddock was smitten by the mat fever while acting as a second back in the halcyon days when Jim Londos was king of all he surveyed. The 22-year-old youngster worked at the Auditorium and there picked up many rudiments of the game. He saw Jim McMillen, Tiny Roebuck, Rudy Dusek and Everett Marshall, to mention a few, work, and got something from each.

Employed by the Merchant Marine, Craddock started wrestling while stationed on the West Coast and performed for Jack Raynolds, veteran promoter. His work carried him to Honolulu, Hawaii, and he continued wrestling overseas and met with fair success. Turner looked him over in the gym this week and thinks the lad has the makings of a top-notch workman.

Approximately 1,000 pounds of beef on the hoof will be in the ring tomorrow when the feature bout comes up. Jacobs tips the beam at 350, Chief Sanooke at 380, and Referee "Cyclone" Burns at 225—roughly speaking.

Dropkick Murphy meets "Dutch" Schultz in the semifinal, and in the preliminaries Chief Thunderbird wrestles Bhu Pinder, and Louis Bacigalupi tackles Ivan Vacturoff.

Yanks Beat Athletics, 5-3

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 26.—Breaking loose with their first "big inning" of the season, the New York Yankees today smacked out six hits for five runs in the third to beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 5 to 3.

The champions' one big blast included a home run by Flash Gordon with one on; a double by Lou Gehrig, which drove in the first run, and singles by Frank Crosetti, Red Rolfe, Jack Powell and Myril Hoag. Gehrig's two-bagger was his second hit of the season.

The Yanks did all their scoring off Southpaw Ed Smith, and could get only two hits the rest of the way off Lynn Nelson. Meanwhile, Monte Pearson pitched the full game for the winners, to chalk up his first victory of the year.

Abrams' Foe NextMonday Rated Tough

Buckley Thinks O'Boyne Is of Title Stature; Local Youth Busy.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

That George Abrams, District middleweight, still nurses an ambition to wear the regal crown adorning the unblemished features of Freddy Steele was quite apparent yesterday as he speeded up work for Monday night's eight-round bout with Irish Johnny O'Boyne, of Boston.

A couple of surplus pounds the Southwest youngster put on during a two-week vacation have disappeared after three days of gym work, and his boxing, dulled by the same lay-off, is being honed to fine edge for the encounter. Abrams wants to be right for the fight, and will be if yesterday's workout was a criterion.

Victory Was Tonic.

But talk is an economical exercise as far as Abrams is concerned, and he'll let his ringwork speak for itself. Abrams gained a world of confidence in his own ability by outpointing Jimmy Jones in their return bout after beng flattened by the Baltimorean two weeks previous. It was a tonic for his flagging spirits, and an eye-opener for ring fans. It proved, at least, that the kid has heart.

Few fighters in the sport's history have come back in such a brief space of time and whipped men who knocked them out. Usually they avoided them altogether, but if they did consent to a return bout an interval of a year or more elapsed before the second fight. Stanley Ketchel's affair with Billy Papke was an exception to the rule, but Stanley was an exceptional fighter. Papke put the snore on Ketchel, and Stanley couldn't wait to get back in the ring with him. It was a sorry day for Papke when he did.

Leonard Shunned Fleming.

Benny Leonard, the records show, developed a sudden case of writer's cramp when articles were presented for a return bout with Frankie Fleming, of Canada, who had belted him out. That was before Leonard won the title, of course, but he was wise enough to recognize in Fleming a tall barrier blocking his path to the championship. He carefully avoided a return bout.

Jack Dempsey didn't meet Fireman Jim Flynn until nearly two years after being knocked out by that worthy, and Johnny Dundee flatly rejected a proposition to box Willie Jackson after that terrific right-hand punch had put him in moth balls. Even Goldie Ahearn, a fair to middling featherweight in his day, gave Al Foreman and Frankie Rice wide berths after bumping his chin on their Sunday punches.

But Abrams wasn't timid about asking for another shot at Jones, even though he had to take the short end of the pay-off. It proved he has heart. We all know he can box, and, we understand, he has ordered a brand-new knockout punch to be delivered Monday night at the Arena—but not by O'Boyne.

Prep Golf Team Keeps Loop Lead

Georgetown Prep School's golfers retained their undefeated status in the Metropolitan Scholastic League yesterday by defeating Western, 6½ to 2½, over the Garrett Park course for their fifth consecutive win.

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase High golfers handed the defending Dawes Cup champion Roosevelt High team an unexpected defeat at Congressional by winning, 6 to 3, scoring the deciding points in first two foursomes.

In other matches Devitt scored its first victory over Tech by a 4 and 2 margin at Washington, and St. John's won its second victory by trouncing Montgomery-Blair High at Manor, 6 to 3.

Rookie Livingston Released by Nats

Mickey Livingston, rookie catcher who was widely acclaimed when he joined the Nats in spring training, yesterday was released to the Trenton club of the Eastern League. The Nats reserved the right to recall him on a 24-hour notice.

Livingston's release reduced the Nats' squad to 24 players, one above the 23-player limit, which must be reached by May 15. Manager Bucky Harris is expected to announce the release of a rookie pitcher before that date.

Jimmy DeShong will go to the mound today in the final battle of the series with the Red Sox. Manager Joe Cronin, after a disastrous experience with right-handed Johnny Marcum, will send southpaw Archie McKain to the mound.

Tigers Beat Browns, 7-1

St. Louis, April 26 (AP).—The Tigers continued their pull out of an early season slump today at the expense of the Browns, winning 7 to 1. The Browns' starting pitcher, Oral Hildebrand, who had five strikeouts to his credit, was chased from the game in the fifth inning when he and Umpire Bob Grieve disagreed over the calling of balls and strikes.

a moment later when Cronin attempted to cross the plate on a double steal, and he was out.

The Red Sox did tie the score in the sixth after Cramer walked and Vosmik singled, but in the same inning the Nats went to the fore again, 3-2, after Travis singled and took second as Chapman bobbled the hit. Rick Ferrell's long fly scored Travis from third.

That homer by Bonura upped the Nats lead to 5-2 in the seventh, but the Sox rushed across two runs in the eighth to cut it to 5-4. However, Buddy Myer started a one-run rally in the eighth with a single to center and when Cramer and Chapman pulled an Alphonse-Gaston act on Appleton's liner to center, Myer scored.

Hoyas Meet Owls; Terps Tackle Navy

Petroskey Slated to Pitch Against Temple in Game Here.

By Jack Munhall.

Relieved of the pressure which habitually accompanies lengthy winning streaks, Georgetown University's once-beaten nine returns to the diamond this afternoon to engage Temple on the medical field while Maryland, its only conqueror in 20 collegiate games, travels to Annapolis to tackle Navy. The Hoya game is at 3 o'clock.

Anxious to start immediately the task of molding another chain of victories, Georgetown's coach, Joe Judge, is expected to nominate Big Mike Petroskey to work against the Owls.

Petroskey's opponent probably will be Jack Williams, the same lad whom Georgetown beat, 9-7, last season.

Maryland's joust with the Midshipmen, scheduled for 4 o'clock, should just about determine whether its season will be unusually successful or just so-so. Their confidence bolstered by the surprise defeat of the Hoyas, the unpredictable Terps are expected to return to the early season form which carried them to five straight wins.

The starting Maryland pitcher will be either Bill Steiner who pitched splendidly against Georgetown before tiring in the ninth inning or Charley Weidinger, the temperamental right-hander.

It was announced yesterday that Georgetown will enter five events in the annual Penn Relays Friday and Saturday at Philadelphia.

After two weeks of competitive workouts which have enabled him to thoroughly size up each candidate, Coach Mulligan feels his boys have an excellent chance to bring back at least one title.

Georgetown's 1-mile relay team of George Bogan, Leroy Green, Stewart Reeves and Al Fry will see action first, competing in a race Friday at 5:30 o'clock. Then on Saturday at 10 in the morning, the 2-mile relay team, composed of Green, Reeves, Bogan and Ed Marlow, will take to the cinders.

The Hoyas' lone individual entry is Jesse Ford, a pole vaulter. He has been doing slightly over 11 feet 6 inches.

Workman Rides Burning Star to Victory in Havre de Grace Feature

Walter Haight

For a while it appeared that Churchill Downs might have to broaden its track or start the Kentucky Derby in sections, due to the large number of probable starters, but every day in every way the field grows smaller and instead of the 22 to 25 hopefuls expected to parade postward a month ago, a starting group of not more than 15 is anticipated.

HAIGHT.

At this writing the likely favorites are Stagehand, Fighting Fox and Dauber, although the latter is being extensively backed only in the East, particularly in Maryland. The race, due May 7, is a rather open affair now and promises to remain so. If Earl Sande insists on keeping Stagehand out of competition before the Derby I would not be surprised if Fighting Fox did not draw the bulk of mutuel play on the day of the race.

Menow may not be in action, much to the delight of the men who conduct future books on races. Menow goes to the post in Kentucky late this week and must make amends for that poor recent effort of Hal Price Headley will place his hopes in Bourbon King.

Like Dauber, Bourbon King's Derby stock took sudden rise as the result of a single race at Havre de Grace. He came off the pace to win the Chesapeake Stakes, the race that War Admiral used as a "prep" for the Derby last year. Dauber second to Stagehand in the Sanita Anita Derby last winter, was stamped as a Derby threat because of a stretch drive in a race early last week.

• • • •

After Dauber made an eighth of a mile run to the wire, Willie duPont & Co. carted him off to the Delaware Park track to put on the finishing touches.

Form doesn't always hold good from year to year especially among young horses. But if one is a student of cold figures—the story of past performances—he has to give serious consideration to a little colt out of Virginia. This fellow is Nedayr, son of Neddie and Sunayr, who will carry the colors of Willis Sharpe Kilmer, owner of Sun Beau, greatest United States money winner of all time.

Nedayr wasn't particularly impressive in his 1938 debut at New York. But neither was he impressive at the start of last season. He made his first appearance in a maiden race at Belmont, never being better than eleventh in a 14-horse field. In August, at Saratoga, Nedayr turned on the heat in a 5½-furlong maiden event. He led until the final jumps before surrendering by a neck to Bull Whip, a Derby hope who since has gone by the boards. However, Redbreast, Greentree Stable's highly regarded colt, was behind him.

• • • •

Nedayr evidently wasn't ready for the big time at this stage of his career for Sky Larking, Maetall and Chaps filled the money bracket in his next start with Nedayr tenth. Still sprinting, the Neddie colt emerged from the maiden ranks in his following start at Aqueduct, leaving in his wake a field that included Blind Eagle, who will represent Mrs. Emil Denemark in the Derby.

From that race, Nedayr improved steadily. At Belmont Park he finished a bang-up fourth to Mountain Ridge and Bourbon King and then went on to Maryland and 2-year-old greatness. It was at Laurel that he showed staying qualities for the first time. Going six furlongs, he was beaten a length by Teddy's Comet after having all kinds of trouble soon after the start. Nedayr would have been the winner that day in a few more strides.

As a sire, Neddie had always been more or less shy on producing distance colts. The boys and girls at Pimlico looked at Nedayr's breeding and checked the distance as a mile and a sixteenth. Most of them discarded him and looked elsewhere on the program for the winner. Thus Nedayr went to the post at 15-1.

• • • •

The Virginia colt looked like a 100-1 shot when the running began. He was a uncomplimentary sixth as the field straightened out on the backstretch. On the swing to the final straightaway, Nedayr began pumping. Running in his accustomed style with his head down, he circled horses to gain contention. He disposed of all but Sir Raleigh. The Millsdale Stable colt was a tough nut to crack, but Nedayr proved tougher. He got abreast of his rival and from midstretch to the wire they bobbed along, fighting all the way.

It was Nedayr, his staying qualities doubted less than two minutes before, the winner by a nose. A winner who came from behind.

Next came the Pimlico Futurity. Nedayr was 3-1 for this a mile and a sixteenth race. He hopped to the front at the bell, set sail and never was threatened, winning by two lengths under a pull. Behind came Dauber, Bourbon King and six others, huffing and puffing for all they were worth, but there wasn't a real menace in the carload.

So if you like Dauber or Bourbon King for the Derby, you better make room in the corner of your eye for Nedayr, gallant son of Neddie.

10,000 See Shandon Ace In Triumph

4-Year-Old Comes Out of Semiretirement to Win Easily.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 26.—H. G. Stanley's Little Tramp, a $13.40 betting proposition, downed W. Zakoor's Blox by a neck to win the sixth race which drew a field of six 3-year-olds for a mile and a sixteenth trip. Broad Vision was third, beaten about a half length for all the money. Little Tramp was handled well by Jockey L. Laurin, generally rated a half-mile rider.

Khay, ridden by Eddie Smith, Washington jockey, won the seventh race to bring his backers a $19.40 mutuel. Patchpocket was second and Morris Griner was third.

Burning Star, Shandon Farm ace, promises to give the "hot foot" to a lot of handicap talent in 1938. The son of Burning Blaze, whose lustre was somewhat dulled last year because he had to play third fiddle to War Admiral and Pompoon, came out of semi-retirement to run away with four opponents in the Riderwood Purse, a feature race watched by a crowd of 10,000.

The 4-year-old, with Sonny Workman his jockey, toyed with Tempestuous, Challephen, Gerald and Kenyon C. He spotted them many lengths while Workman was getting him into high gear. However, once he began to run, it was all over but the $4.10 pay off to the favorite players in back of the stands.

To make the effort more convincing, Burning Star carried a load of 122 pounds and was clocked for the mile and a sixteenth in 1:45. The track record for the route, held by Cavalcade, is 1:43 3-5. Burning Star turned the trick while coasting to the wire six lengths in front of a driving Tempestuous.

The race was run under clear skies and over a fast track. The canned music dealt out here sounded beautiful to the lucky daily doublers, who invested the usual two bucks in the combination of "12 and 3." They collected a $491 mutuel.

Managers Eye Summer Season In Night Clubs

Troika Getting a Brand New Show; Other Places Change Programs.

By Chanticleer

Smart managers are already booking new ensembles for the summer season. The Troika, which closes May 21, has a brand-new show. If you have not been there this season to enjoy the atmosphere of this gay gypsy Russia, you will certainly want to. The chef has a wide repertoire of authentic Russian dishes that date back to the Czar's regime.

Two new entertainers step down the gangway of the S. S. Anchor Room of the Annapolis this week. Clyde Kissinger and Jayne Lowe, boy and girl specialists in music and song, professionally known as "We Two," have recently appeared with success in the Congress Hotel, Chicago; the Milwaukee Athletic Club and the Netherlands-Plaza Hotel in Cincinnati. Clyde does vocal solos and duos with Miss Lowe and plays the guitar. Miss Lowe is at her best on accordion solos of such numbers as "Dizzy Fingers" and "Tiger Rag."

The Lotus this week features the five Ames sisters. They do acrobatic feats, sing, and do rhythm dances. Also on this five-star program Stephanie and Crain introduce an original waltz called "Marionette." Herbert Dexter appears with Jerry in a dummy act. Bill Strickland and his Capitolians play during lunch, dinner, and late supper.

The Shoreham is bringing Russ Jones, who produced the Black Forest Ice Carnival at the Chicago World's Fair, to direct their Ice Show this spring. The date of the Ice Show opening, May 2, is a date to remember.

From the numerous notes pouring out of The Willard's new Blue Grotto it would seem that Host Harry Somerville is going to add a new act to the Tyner-Haslett combination, already entertaining nightly from 10 until 2.

Tonight is a "Night in the Orient" in the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh. The Magic Carpet will transport you direct to the court of Haroun Al Raschid, where harem damsels will dance to Mario di Polo's orchestra. You may win a bottle of champagne in the prize waltz.

Drive or ride out to the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo Park if you wish dancing in a romantic atmosphere. A smooth floor, and tunes by Ralph Webster and his N. B. C. Orchestra are attractions that patrons cannot resist. Along with Webster are the voices of Jayne Denton, Russ Bodine, Bill Cavanaugh and Tiny Hardesty, plus the "Electric Piano" and the Royal Flush of Swing.

Patty and Lucilla, a California sister team with Arabian dances, are on the new show at the Bamboo Gardens. Betty Lane with acrobatics, Miller and Millard, dance duo and Gallo and Bozza are also billed.

Countess H. DeBournant, mystic, has returned to the Mayfair. There is also Perry Martin, the baritone pianist who is always starting a song when you want your girl's full attention—but somehow you won't mind.

Chatter:

Little Mary Ruth Milan, who reigns as Queen at the Shar-zad singing with the King Jesters, was down at Annapolis again last week. We wonder just which midshipman is the fortunate lad.

The Madrillon this week is featuring freshly caught, freshly broiled Potomac River shad. Their chef has learned the art of serving it sans bones.

Special thanks to the String Swingsters, Libby Frazier, Hill Billy Dick Reger and last but not least the beverages at the Hi Hat.

U. S. Steel Corp. Reports Loss In 1st Quarter

Deficit Is $1,292,151; in 1937 Period Profit Was $28,561,533.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 26.—Announcing a deficit for the first quarter of this year, Edward R. Stettinius, jr., presiding yesterday for the first time at a directors' meeting as chairman of the United States Steel Corp., said:

"Due chiefly to the low rate of production which extended throughout the entire first quarter, and consequently the higher unit operating costs which result as the business volume recedes, the earnings for the first three months of the year correspondingly declined."

The deficit for the three months ended March 31 was $1,292,151, which compares with a net income of $4,591,505 for the December quarter of last year and with net income of $28,561,533 in the first quarter of 1937. The first quarter deficit was the first for that period since 1935. Directors, all of whom were present except Thomas W. Lamont, who is in Washington testifying before the SEC on the affairs of Richard Whitney, declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred, payable May 20 to stock of record April 28. No action was taken on the common stock.

Operating Rate 32.3 Per Cent.

The operating rate for the quarter was 32.3 per cent of production capacity, compared with 41.3 per cent for the preceding quarter and 82.6 per cent for the first quarter of 1937. Shipments ran ahead of production in the first quarter of 1938, amounting to 35.3 per cent of total capacity. Shipments in the first quarter totaled 1,565,244 tons, compared with 3,698,041 for the corresponding quarter in 1937. A decrease of 57.6 per cent. Shipments thus far in April have averaged slightly under those for the first quarter.

The corporation paid its remaining arrearage on preferred dividends last August. Subsequently, regular dividends of $1.75 were declared in October and January. Nothing has been paid on the common since last December when $1 was ordered, the first since 1932.

Stettinius said that construction work for plant modernization and improvement is progressing on schedule. Capital outlays for these purposes and for payment of maturing bonds and other capital obligations of subsidiary companies amounted to approximately $26,000,000. On April 1 the extended balance on approved appropriation made to date for additions and betterment stood at $56,000,000.

Employment for the quarter decreased 14 per cent from the first quarter of 1937 and during the same period the total pay roll decreased 34.6 per cent. Approximately 205,000 persons are on the pay roll, many of them on part time. This part-time employment, Stettinius said, extends not only to the wage-earning groups but to salaried employes and executives as well.

Wheat Rally Follows Drop To 4-Year Low

News That Britain Had Piled Up a Big Reserve Topples Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 26.—Unsettled by the disclosure that Great Britain had secretly accumulated big reserve supplies, wheat tumbled today to a four-year low price record, but later overcame losses.

After the fall to the new bottom level, 1½ cents down, previous speculative sellers here bought heavily, with the market rising fast, and then reacting somewhat. Thoroughout the day, export demand for North American wheat remained disappointingly light.

Sudden cable notice of the fact that British officials in London without formal authority had been buying in private for government use huge amounts of wheat in order to forestall price jumps took Chicago traders by surprise.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝ off to ⅜ up compared with yesterday's finish, May 81¼@81¾, July 80¾@80⅞, corn ½-½ down, May 58½@58⅝, July 60¼@60⅝, oats showing ¼-⅜ decline, rye varying from ¼ setback to ⅜ gain, and provisions 5 to 27 cents lower.

Stocks Continue Downward in Listless Trading; Bonds and Commodities Lower.

New York, April 26.—Even United States Government bonds moved over to the depressed areas and worked lower on small sales volume. Stocks were sold in less than half-a-million-share dealings, ending the day with losses of a fraction to as much as 3 points in a few issues that had thin markets. The first hour of stock trading saw the smallest turnover since September 10, 1934, with 80,000 shares, but the day's total was a bit larger than that of yesterday. Commodities weakened. Dollars hardened, particularly against sterling, which lost 1 cent. May wheat closed half a cent down at 81⅝ cents a bushel.

With the stream of stock trading running so sluggishly the direction in which prices were carried didn't mean much. The market said plainly enough that it didn't know which way to go. Leading stocks, if they appeared at all, were irregularly lower at the opening, enjoyed a brief hardening period before noon, and then declined fractions to a point or two. Some of the waterlogged shares dipped as much as 3 points. Most stocks brought their lowest prices in the third hour of trading, but final prices were not much better.

Preferreds Drop.

Chesapeake & Ohio preferred fell 10 points on its first sale in nearly a month. A bid and offer price of 65@74 preceded a sale at 70. Steel preferred fell 2 points below par, although most prophets felt that the corporation directors at their meeting this afternoon would be inclined once more to pay the regular quarterly dividend. American Can, in which no sale was made yesterday, fell more than 3 points on the opening sale during the noon hour.

Cohemic, motor, metal, farm and steel divisions were hit hardest. Dow Chemical broke 5 points and du Pont fell below par on a loss of nearly 3 points. Harvester softened 4 points. Airplanes came in for some further profit taking and gave up a point or so. Utilities were mixed. Rails were fractionally lower. Dealings on the curb exchange were also slack and prices were lower. Aluminum opened 4 points down. Buckeye Pipe Line made a new low on a fall of more than a point. Jones & Laughlin broke 3 points.

Smiling Through Tears.

There isn't much fun in being bearish, and brokers in particular abhor bear markets, for it is difficult to obtain much public interest on the downside. The small trader either buys or stays out. If he buys in a falling market, he can't pay commissions for quite a while. Brokers (and they are not alone) are straining their eyesight these days to catch sight of something bullish, but the stock market makes it plain that nothing much has been seen so far. Hopes for inflation have had to be deferred, at least until after Congress shows what it may do with the increased spending program.

Unless a speculative fillip can be given soon to the markets, by way of a pink rabbit to be drawn from the presidential bonnet, the present sluggishness may have to be endured for some time. If stocks are going to wait for good evidence of increased business activity, they are unlikely to move soon. It is seldom that business picks up much before late summer, even in periods of ordinary changes in the trade tides. Second quarter profits accounts scarcely will show any improvement over first quarter, and for some companies they will be worse. For all that the market has friends who say that stocks are oversold, that everything bad about business has been discounted, and that an advance from this point is more likely than a further decline.

Balanced Budget.

Had there not been so many predictions that the British chancellor, in introducing his budget, would avoid substantial tax increases, it is probable that the budget would not have given sterling the shock it received on the news of the boost in the income tax, the tea duty and the oil duty. At least it may be said that the British provide the money from revenue before it is spent, while in this country the custom is to spend and then raise by taxation half of what sound financing would dictate.

The new British basic income tax rate of 5 shillings 6 pence on the pound, or 27½ per cent, is within 6 pence of the 30 per cent income tax which Britons paid at the peak of the World War. The chancellor's assertion that there would be supplementary defense expenditure later in the year to be met from loans, and that the peak of war preparation expenditure would not be reached until next year were not particularly reassuring. The budget surplus of revenue for the fiscal year ended March 31, it was disclosed, was $143,000,000.

Banking Position.

Bank credit increased slightly in the week of April 20, figures from reporting banks in 101 cities disclose, chiefly because of increases in brokers' loans and in Government securities at New York City banks. Brokers' loans rose $51,000,000 and loans to banks were up $8,000,000, entirely in New York. The gain in Government securities was $17,000,000 for the country at large, there being increases of $43,000,000 here and $27,000,000 in San Francisco, partly offset by declines of $16,000,000 each in Cleveland and in Chicago and $11,000,000 in Boston. Government guaranteed securities increased $8,000,000, while other securities went down $28,000,000. Commercial loans dropped $38,000,000, of which $12,000,000 was in New York and $10,000,000 in Chicago. A big rise in deposits of out-of-town banks in New York City banks lifted deposits of domestic banks by $285,000,000, but other deposits were little changed. Reserves rose $167,000,000.

Texas Corp. 'Ads' To Tell Tax Facts

New York, April 26 (AP).—Stockholders of the Texas Corp. at their annual meeting today unanimously passed a resolution authorizing officers of the company to embark upon a newspaper advertising campaign "to tell the facts" about business problems in relation to taxation. The motion was made by J. Newcomb Blackman, who recommended that the Texas Corp. and other large companies take full pages throughout the country. "Get the facts home to the public," he said. "Don't attack anybody." T. Reiber, chairman, said that in 1937 the corporation paid $104,000,000 in taxes, twice the total of all salaries paid.

High Salaries Keep Best Men, DuPont Says

Answers Criticism of Sum Paid to Sloan, General Motors Chairman.

By the Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., April 26.—Lammot duPont, a director, said at the annual stockholders' meeting of General Motors Corporation today that "corporations must pay high salaries to keep their successful executives."

He made the statement in answer to a criticism of the salary paid Alfred P. Sloan, jr., as chairman of the board. The critic was John J. Gilbert, a minority stockholder.

DuPont said that Sloan was of great value to the company, "not only from an executive and business standpoint, but because of the high regard in which the workers hold him."

DuPont said that total compensations paid its officials by General Motors, a Delaware corporation, "are less in proportion to its profits and sales than any other large corporation, and its business is more in proportion to its capital investment."

He remarked that if each General Motors worker would increase his efficiency only 1 per cent, the corporation would save $3,000,000. "That makes Mr. Sloan's compensation look rather cheap," he said.

Directors were re-elected. They will meet in New York Monday to organize.

Socony-Vacuum Net $56,808,264 in Year

New York, April 26 (AP).—Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. reported today a net profit of $56,808,264, equal to $1.82 a share, for 1937. This compares with $42,909,363, or $1.38 a share, in 1936. John A. Brown, president, in his letter to stockholders, said "gasoline inventories for the whole country for the industry were too high at the close of the year, and inventories of fuel oils were increasing with reduced general business activity.

"At the time of writing this report, it seems probable that 1938 will see a slight increase in gasoline consumption, a decline in consumption of other products and lower profits.

New York, April 26 (AP).—May liquidation depressed cotton today after opening rallies. July sold off from 8.93 to 8.78 to close at the low, with final prices 5 to 9 points net lower.

The market opened 3 to 5 points higher in response to steady Liverpool cavles and on foreign buying. The issuance of notices representing 7,700 bales on first May notice day, at first had little effect as trade shorts covered but when the notices continued to circulate and it appeared that large spot interests were not absorbing the near month, increased liquidation developed in both May and July.

Bob Burns Says—

Somehow people have got the idea that my folks down home are easy going and listless, but I wanta tell you if you give 'em a goal to work for, they'll surprise you.

Not long ago, a fella was visitin' my home town and he noticed that while all the other citizens were mostly just sittin' around, every time he saw my Uncle Hod, he would be dashin' up and down the street on the run. The stranger called my uncle over and says: "You seem to be the most ambitious man in town."

Uncle Hod says: "Am I ambitious—brother I won't be satisfied until my wife is doing all the first-class washings in this town."

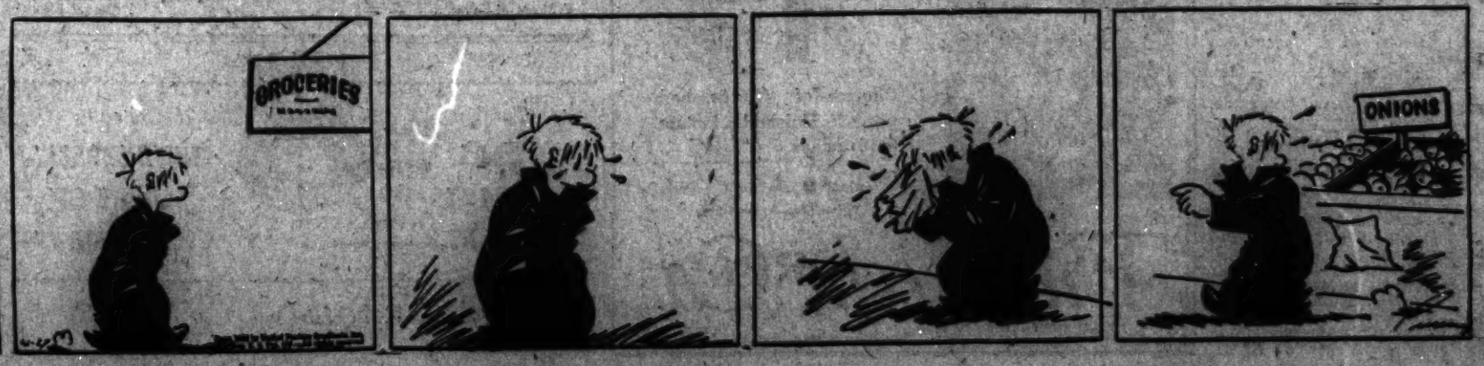
BENNY He Knows His Onions By J. Carver Pusey



Farley Denies That President Hates Business

Says His Foes 'Might as Well Accuse Him of Burning Barns.'

By the Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., April 26.—Postmaster General Farley scoffed at charges that the Roosevelt Administration was unfriendly to business and that the President was inclined to seek a dictatorship in a speech here tonight defending the Federal Government's recovery spending program.

"Nothing could be sillier than the idea that this Administration—or any other Administration for that matter—is an enemy of business," said Farley before a six-State conference of women Democratic leaders. His speech was broadcast over a Nation-wide hookup.

Of the word "dictatorship" Farley asserted:

"Actually they might as well accuse the President of going around the country burning barns and stealing sheep."

Says 'Priming' Worked.

Opponents of the "pump-priming" plan, he said, charged that the previous spending program "effected only a temporary improvement in our economy, and therefore should not be tried again."

"Well," he answered, "the process did get us back to a state of affairs where dividends and business profits were among the commonplaces of industry and farming."

The "permanent results," he said, were apparent in every city where buildings have gone up, in every rural community where good roads have been run, in numerous post-offices and in 50,000 schools, besides in the work of the Civilian Conservation Corps, "not only in the forest protection and flood prevention, but in the salvation of 1,000,000 fine boys who but for this opportunity afforded by the camps, would have been exposed to the perils of joblessness, and many of whom would have sunk in a swamp of despond."

"Maintained Confidence."

That program, he asserted, "kept this country from social disturbance, preserved intact our American institutions, restored and maintained confidence in our banks."

The Cabinet officer said:

"No administration can be successful unless it struggles always for the prosperity of the Nation. This does not mean in all cases that its must enlist on the side of those who have already great fortunes and think that those fortunes should be increased without regard to the term of millions of American citizens dependent on their labor for their daily bread. There is no real prosperity in a nation made up of a few hundred multimillionaires, with a great mass of the people so near the starvation line that their every day is a day of anxiety."

Frank K. Green Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

Funeral services for Frank Key Green, marshal of the United States Supreme Court for 23 years, will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. at Holy Trinity Church, Georgetown. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Green, who died yesterday at Emergency Hospital at the age of 61, had served at the Supreme Court longer than any other present employe. He was appointed a page in 1891, when 14, and successively rose to be librarian, crier, and, in 1915, marshal, a post he occupied at the time of his death.

As marshal, his duty was to issue subpenas for witnesses to the court. He often recalled that his first subpena was served on J. P. Morgan, jr., to show cause why he should not surrender to the State of Virginia the will of Martha Washington, which the younger Morgan had inherited from his father. The will had allegedly been stolen from the clerk's office of Fairfax County by soldiers during the Civil War. Morgan returned the will to Virginia before the case was heard.

Mr. Green was well known to hundreds of distinguished visitors to the Supreme Court, whom he escorted into the courtroom through a special side entrance. In addition to being marshal, he was superintendent of the building.

A member of the Sons of the American Revolution, Mr. Green was a descendant of George Plater, one of the early governors of Maryland. Great grandson of Uriah Forrest, an officer on George Washington's staff, Mr. Green was the son of George Forrest and Maria Devereux Green. He was born in Washington on the old Rosedale estate, originally owned by Uriah Forrest. Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star-Spangled Banner," was related by marriage to Mr. Green's family.

He is survived by a stepdaughter, Miss Virginia Ellis, of Washington; three sisters, Mrs. Ann F. Wheat, Miss Georgia F. Green and Mrs. Walter S. Matthews, all of Georgetown, and three brothers, George Plater Green, of Cleveland; Devereux Green, of Georgetown, and Zola C. Green, of Chicago. Mr. Green's home was at 3122 Q street, Georgetown.

Thomas E. Turpin Rites Set for Today

Funeral services for Thomas Edmunds Turpin, who died Sunday, will be held at his home, 604 Longfellow street northwest, at 11 a. m. today. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

A patent attorney for a half century, Mr. Turpin at the time of his death was associated with the firm of Clarence A. O'Brien and Hyman Berman. Born in Washington 67 years ago, he was educated in local public schools and at Georgetown University.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Aspasia Turpin, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Belle Prosperi, of Washington.

Services at 2 Today For Maj. Gen. Swift

Funeral services for Maj. Gen. Eben Swift, retired, who died here on Monday, will be held with full military honors at 2 p. m. today in Arlington Cemetery. The honorary pallbearers will be Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely; Maj. Gen. Peter C. Harris; Col. Gustav. J. Fiebeger; Col. Alonso Gray; Col. Alexander Rodgers, and Maj. Parker W. West.

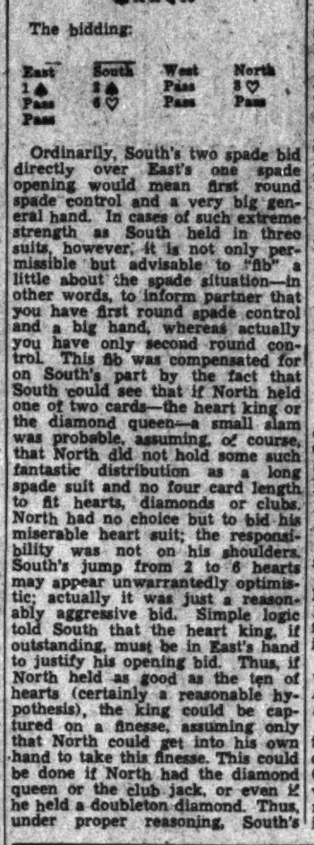
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Bidding the Opponents' Suit.

The opportunity to "cue bid" the opponents' suit on the first round of bidding does not arise very often, inasmuch as the honor trick and distributional requirements for this enormously strong bid are necessarily high. As almost everyone knows, to overcall an opponent's bid with the same suit is the strongest measure available and such an overcall is forcing to game. Consider South's glorious opportunity in the following hand:

East, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	6 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Ordinarily, South's two spade bid directly over East's one spade opening would mean first round spade control and a very big general hand. In cases of such extreme strength as South held in three suits, however, it is not only permissible but advisable to "fib" a little about the spade situation—in other words, to inform partner that you have first round spade control and a big hand, whereas actually you have only second round control. This fib was compensated for on South's part by the fact that South could see that if North held one of two cards—the heart king or the diamond queen—a small slam was probable, assuming, of course, that North did not hold some such fantastic distribution as a long spade suit and no four card length to fit hearts, diamonds or clubs. North had no choice but to bid his miserable heart suit; the responsibility was not on his shoulders. South's jump from 2 to 6 hearts may appear unwarrantedly optimistic; actually it was just a reasonably aggressive bid. Simple logic told South that the heart king, if outstanding, must be in East's hand to justify his opening bid. Thus, if North held as good as the ten of hearts (certainly a reasonable hypothesis), the king could be captured on a finesse, assuming only that North could get into his own hand to take this finesse. This could be done if North had the diamond queen or the club jack, or even if he held a doubleton diamond. Thus, under proper reasoning, South's highly aggressive bidding becomes merely logical. The contract met with the success it deserved.

East opened the spade king and continued with the ace. Declarer carefully protected his finessing position in hearts by ruffing with South's jack. North then entered his hand with the diamond queen, led the heart ten, and East was helpless. As it happened he did not cover, but a heart continuation from North picked up the king.

It will be noted that if declarer had carelessly ruffed the second spade with the nine of hearts instead of the jack, the slam contract would have been doomed to failure. North could enter his own hand only once and, with dummy reduced to the A-Q-J of hearts, East's king could not have been picked up.
